Courts may chop awards, bikers warned

INVASION OF THE POLES? They aren't props for a science fiction movie, although there is a connection with cinema. The steel pilings are being driven into the ground on the site of the old Capitol Theatre at Yates and Blanshard, recently demolished by Famous Players. Poles will provide footings for new Capitol Six film palace scheduled to open next year. Red brick building will have six theatres.

B.C.'s motorcyclists were warned today they face substantially reduced insurance settlements if they suffer head injuries while not wearing a helmet.

The warning came from Insurance Corporation of B.C. spokesman Bob Egby after the province's compulsory helmet law was shot down Monday by Vancouver provincial court judge Cyril Woodcliffe.

Egby said settlement reductions are made regularly but only cases involving large claims that reach the higher courts come to the attention of the public.

He said the provisions of common law still apply despite the lower court ruling.

Judge Woodcliffe ruled the Motor Vehicle Act does not give the superintendent of motor vehicles the authority to regulate the use of helmets. He said that authority belongs to the provincial cabinet.

But Egby said if it can be shown medically that a person's injuries were made more severe by not wearing a helmet or a seatbelt, then ICBC will argue for a reduction in the settlement.

He said when it is proved not wearing a seatbelt or a helmet contributed to a person's injuries, the corporation and the civil courts conclude the victim was negligent and contributed to his or her own injuries.

"It's upon you to take any action to prevent or reduce any injuries to yourself when there's an accident," Egby said.

The provincial government will appeal Woodcliffe's ruling.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, Alberta's helmet law suffered a setback when a man accused of operating a motorcycle without a helmet had the charge dismissed in traffic court.

Provincial court judge Ray Thomas ruled the province's motorcycle legislation is contrary to the Alberta Bill of Rights.

James Pennington, 27, was charged following a demonstration by members of the Bikers Rights Organization who were protesting the province's compulsory helmet legislation.

Judge Thomas said in an interview later the province's law is "Big Brother legislation."

"It's legislating me against myself. I see it as being contrary to the Alberta Bill of Rights."

Thomas said current laws enforcing the use of seat belts in some provinces are similar to the one forcing motorcyclists to wear helmets. Alberta does not have mandatory seatbelt legislation.

The judge refused to speculate if an appeal will be launched by the Crown.

"They can do what they want, but I think I've opened a wasp's nest."

Anxious time for firemen until propane leak found

Colwood RCMP and Langford fire officials today expressed grave concern over a potentially devastating propane gas leak from a railway tank car in Vancouver Island Gas Co.'s yard at 2885 Jacklin Road Tuesday night.

The leak, detected about 11 p.m. by a Bray Avenue resident who heard hissing, gave police and firemen several anxious moments.

"One match in the wrong place and the blast would have levelled everything in a six-block radius," a police spokesman said.

Joe McBride, manager of the gas works, however, downplayed the dangers.

"It was no major thing," he said. "It was only a small leak from a valve and there was no excessive amount of gas around."

McBride refused further comment but Langford fire chief Al Le Quesne said he was very concerned.

He said the leak had apparently existed for some time and firemen were worried because the wind was carrying the gas toward an industrial area.

Le Quesne said when he first arrived, firemen had no idea what was causing the leak.

"But we weren't about to take any chances," he said.

Firemen stood by while Le Quesne and Captain Joe Arden gingerly climbed the tank car, found a small valve open and closed it.

Le Quesne said if the trouble had been major he would have evacuated everyone within a mile of the yard.

"It was unnerving to say the least . . . not a good situation."

Police and firemen were investigating to determine whether the valve was left open by accident or was opened deliberately.

Le Quesne said there was no sign of forced entry into the yard which is surrounded by a chain-link fence topped with barbed wire.

He said the company has a good record for safety and added employees have helped firemen become well-schooled in techniques fighting such fires.

"They have spent a lot of time in the past showing us the various valves and safety features in the equipment in the yard. It paid off."

Black rioters burn trucker

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — Rioting blacks stopped a truck in a Cape Town ghetto Tuesday, dragging its colored driver from the cab, stoning him and then burning him to death in the second such attack in two days, police said.

On Monday, crowds of young blacks stoned and burned to death two white truck drivers in the same ghetto.

South African riot police tried to disperse the crowds Tuesday, charging into them with clubs and firing tear gas.

Police said the colored (mixed race) man was driving his vehicle through the black ghetto when he was "hijacked." They said youths pulled him out of the truck, stoned and then set him on fire. The blacks then attacked another truck and set it on fire, severely burning the occupants.

The spot where they attacked the trucks is ideal for an ambush.

Speeding drunk dies — but tires get blame

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court says Ford Motor Co. was negligent in the death of a Louisiana man who was drunk when his sports car crashed at 168 kilometres an hour.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal said the accident was caused by improper tires, not by the man's drinking or by the excessive speed.

Shelby Leleux died and a passenger was seriously hurt when his 1976 Mercury Cougar crashed near Kaplan on June 6, 1976.

In its ruling Monday, the 5th Circuit upheld a lower court decision by U.S. District Judge Eugene Davis.

The appeal court said Leleux's car was equipped with a 425 horsepower engine and clearly was designed to be capable of speeds over 160 km/h.

But the car was equipped with Goodyear tires designed to be safe only at speeds less than 136 kilometres an hour, the court said.

Ford was negligent, the 5th Circuit said, in not warning Leleux of the tires' limitations.

Trial evidence showed that the left rear tire of the car came apart as Leleux and a friend were driving to a dance in Kaplan.

Ford argued that the men had been drinking for more than eight hours and should have known that driving at 160 km/h was dangerous.

But the 5th Circuit rejected those arguments, saying Leleux had no way of knowing that the tires were safe only up to 136 km/h.

The 5th Circuit also said Goodyear was not at fault because its tires would be safe if used on vehicles which would not be driven faster than 136 km/h.

In its ruling, the 5th Circuit upheld Davis's decision to award $36,000 to Leleux's mother and $36,000 to the injured passenger.

The company had no immediate comment.

Liberal star rising, according to Gallup

MONTREAL (CP) — The proportion of Canadians who approve of the record of the Trudeau government since the February election has increased to 43 per cent in July from 37 per cent in May, says a Gallup poll published today.

The proportion of those who said they disapprove of the government's record dropped slightly to 39 per cent in July from 40 per cent in May, while 19 per cent said they did not know in July compared with 22 per cent in May, the poll said.

The results varied widely by region, with the approval rating in July standing at: 51 per cent for the Atlantic provinces compared with 42 per cent in May; 48 per cent for Quebec compared with 44 per cent in May; 47 per cent in Ontario compared with 39 per cent in May; 27 per cent for the Prairies compared with 30 per cent in May and 29 per cent for British Columbia compared with 22 per cent in May.

The poll also said there has been a slight increase in the proportion of Canadians who said they would vote Liberal, up to 48 per cent in July from 47 per cent in June. Support for the Conservatives among those questioned dropped to 30 per cent in July from 31 per cent in June.

Those who said they support the New Democratic Party increased to 21 per cent in July from 20 per cent in June. Only one per cent of those questioned in July said they would vote for another party compared with two per cent in June.

The poll was conducted through in-home, personal interviews with about 1,000 adults who were 18 years old or more. Gallup said samples of this size should not vary more than four percentage points at a 95-per-cent confidence level.

Golden wedding the real thing

PERTH (UPI) — A couple who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in October found a 320-ounce gold nugget today using a metal detector in the new gold rush in Western Australia.

"The nugget was so heavy, I had to stop for a rest several times on my way back to the car," said 72-year-old Jack Bray.

Recent gold finds have started a rush for the precious metal that has sent thousands of hopeful prospectors to mineral-rich Western Australia and the southeastern state of Victoria, where big finds have also been made.

Bray said he found the nugget, worth $196,800 at current prices, near Kalgoorlie, about 300 miles east of Perth. He said he probed about five inches below the surface with a metal detector and came out with the nugget.

Kalgoorlie has been rediscovered in the new gold rush. Mines have been re-opened because of soaring gold prices and people with metal detectors have been searching the 100-square miles of abandoned gold diggings around town.

Last month a retired businessman and his wife found a 400-ounce nugget near Kalgoorlie. It was the largest nugget found in the recent rush.

Rail wreckers sabotaged

KELOWNA (CP) — Deliberate sabotage of specialized rail equipment being used by Pacific Northern Rail Contractors Corp. to dismantle the historic Kettle Valley Railway has set the company back at least two weeks.

George Braun, vice-president of the Langley firm, said Tuesday damage to three hydraulic spike pullers and a front-end loader is estimated from $13,000 to $15,000.

The vandalism was discovered by workmen Tuesday when they arrived at two locations near McCulloch to continue demolition of the McCulloch-to-Chute Lake section of the railway.

Someone poured sand in the gas tank of a large $28,000 spike puller, ripped off its hydraulic lines, bent its controls, cut fuel lines and battery cables and used a metal bar torn from the two-year-old machine to smash other parts.

A new front-end loader had its dashboard gauges smashed and fuel and electrical lines cut.

Two smaller one-year-old hand spike pullers left eight kilometres up the line the night before had sand poured in their gas tanks. They were then started and after the engines seized were thrown down a steep enbankment.

Workmen will continue dismantling the 48-kilometre rail line using hand tools, Braun said, adding it would be at least two weeks before work is fully mechanized again.

Terry Brown, a member of the Kettle Valley Heritage Society, said the society would "get a black eye for this."

Brown, who assisted Pacific Northern employees in hauling the damaged equipment, said: "It's a crying shame. These guys are just doing their job and there's no sense in making it tough for them."

Kennedy wins on platform

NEW YORK (UPI) — Democrats nominate Jimmy Carter for president again tonight to run on a platform carrying the imprint of his vanquished rival, Sen. Edward Kennedy, whose speech captured the heart of the Democratic Convention for an evening.

Kennedy's old-fashioned, emotional stem-winder Tuesday night brought delegates jammed into Madison Square Garden to their feet and tears to the eyes of his supporters when he blasted Ronald Reagan and ticked off the things that make Democrats different from Republicans.

So electrified were the delegates by the speech and by the wild, 39-minute demonstration it generated, that the Carter forces hastily cut a deal: they would cede Kennedy his $12 billion jobs program in the Democratic platform to avoid a potentially humiliating defeat on national television.

The delegates roared approval of three important economic planks — virtually all Kennedy had fought for except a call for mandatory wage and price controls. He gave that up in what Carter aides called a "significant" concession.

Carter earlier agreed to one Kennedy plank that social programs should not be cut to balance the budget, but violently opposed two others — the jobs program and giving jobs priority over inflation control.

"The mood of the house here, it's Kennedy's night," said Democratic National Chairman John White in explaining the steamroller effect of Kennedy's words. "Everyone wants to show the senator, 'we love you.'"

There was no immediate reaction to the convention action from Carter, who was flying in from Washington today. But campaign chairman Robert Strauss hinted Carter simply may ignore the economic planks added on the floor.

"President Carter feels very strongly that this is a mistake and there's no point in glossing it over,"

Child adoption ads ruled illegal in B.C.

The B.C. government has added a section to the Adoption Act making it an offence, punishable with a maximum $10,000 fine, to advertise for adoption of children.

The new section also makes it an offence to either offer or accept money or a consideration of any kind to induce a person to make a child available for adoption.

Addition of the section follows concerns raised in March about a newspaper advertisement seeking expectant mothers willing to put a child up for adoption in return for pre-natal expenses.

The lawyer who placed the ad said he was fulfilling the request of a client. He said he had used the method two years ago to find a baby for another client.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said then she was shocked by the advertisement and promised legislation to prevent further advertising.

Mrs. McCarthy said the new section will not limit private adoptions, but will ensure adoption won't be treated as a commerical enterprise. About 35 of 727 adoptions in B.C. were carried out privately last year.

Another amendment to the Adoption Act provides for voluntary transfer of guardianship of a child to the superintendent of child welfare during the six-month waiting period between the time the child goes to the adoptive home and the time of the hearing of the adoption order.

Currently, a child's parents retain legal guardianship even though they have signed adoption consents and are no longer in contract with the child.

The minister said many adopting parents had expressed concern about this "legal limbo" and had asked for such an amendment.

Buchanan confirms he's out of politics

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Judd Buchanan, member of Parliament for London West, made it official today — he's through with politics.

Buchanan, former cabinet minister and considered the Liberal party's chief lieutenant in Ontario, had wanted to meet with his local riding executive and break the word to them first but word leaked out of Ottawa on Tuesday.

First elected in 1968, he became minister of Indian and northern affairs in 1974, minister of public works in 1976 and minister of state for science and technology in 1977.

He was dropped from the cabinet following the Feb. 18 election and it was rumored he was unhappy with Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to relegate him to the back benches.

Buchanan, in an interview at his constituency office in downtown London, would only confirm that there was some bitterness and frustration at the time but says it has since dissipated.

Buchanan will become president of a new company in Calgary engaged in natural gas exploration, but said he cannot provide further details because of contractural arrangements still to be concluded.

Another hijack; 'not our week'

MIAMI (AP) — An Air Florida jetliner carrying 74 people was hijacked to Cuba today, the second Air Florida plane in four days hijacked on the short hop between Key West and Miami.

"This isn't our week," said Air Florida spokesman Robin Cohn.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta said Flight 707, diverted 10 minutes after its 10:30 a.m. EDT takeoff from Key West, landed safely in Havana at 11:15 a.m. All 68 passengers and six crew members were reported to be safe.

There was no immediate word on when the plane would be returned.

On Sunday, a Spanish-speaking man hijacked a Miami-Key West flight to Havana.

Argentina inflation hits 140%

GENEVA (UPI) — Argentina had the world's highest rate of inflation last year with prices soaring 140 per cent, the International Labor Organization said today.

Kuwait was at the other end of the scale with an inflation rate of 4.4 percent, the ILO said.

The worst-hit nation after Argentina last year was Israel with inflation of 111 per cent, the ILO said.

Dispute delays ferry

The ferry Queen of the North was delayed for nearly five hours in Port Hardy on northern Vancouver Island on Tuesday when members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union stopped work in a dispute over vessel procedure.

Ron Davis, a spokesman for B.C. Ferry Corp., said union members disputed instructions to carry out a 24-hour visual fire patrol. The patrol is required because of a defect in the vessel's automatic fire alarm panel.

Davis said the dispute was resolved and the vessel continued its voyage to Prince Rupert.

Wild cheers for Kennedy

he said. "We think this plank is wrong ... you can't write an economic program on the floor of a convention."

Eight minority planks remained for action today, but only three were controversial. Two dealt with the MX missile — Kennedy's demands a search for alternatives to the costly system, and another would ban it. The third plank opposes import fees on oil and gas. Kennedy, third brother of a tragedy-scarred family to seek the presidency, ended his bid 24 hours earlier. But he won the hearts of most of the 5,436 delegates and alternates, reciting the liberal principles he called "the heart of our traditions ... the soul of our party across the generations."

He sharply attacked Reagan as an apostle of bygone times, saying the GOP nominee is "no friend of labor ... no friend of our great urban centres ... no friend of the senior citizen ... no friend of the environment."

Women comprise 50 percent of the Democratic delegates, and they demonstrated their clout by adding two feminist planks to the platform.

One would require the party to withhold endorsement and assistance from any Democratic office seeker who opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. The other would reinstate federal fundings of abortions for the poor.

In contrast, the Republicans last month in Detroit refused to back the ERA and pledged to seek a constitutional amendment banning all abortions.

The roll call for the president's renomination highlights tonight's session. Kennedy has asked his name not be placed in nomination, but Rep. Ron Dellums of California, a leader of the blacks at the convention, is attempting to acquire the needed 333 signatures to have his name proposed. Vice President Walter Mondale will be renominated Thursday, and the 38th Democratic convention will end that night.

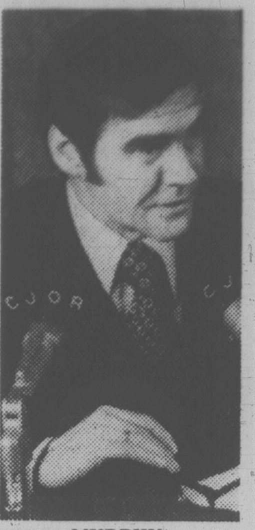
Relief for parched in Ed's (ugh!) beer



MURPHY
. . . old recipe, he says

VANCOUVER (CP) — You'd think two weeks without a beer would drive a man to drink, but a mysterious "draft" with a pale, yellowy hue being made and sold for 75 cents a glass at a downtown pub is driving customers away.

Ed Murphy, former radio hotliner, was bragging Tuesday about the latest entry in the B.C. brewery industry: Murphy's Irish Amber, on tap at his neighborhood pub.

"It's a light draft made from an 180-year-old Irish recipe handed down from father to son," Murphy said in an interview. "Come down and taste it yourself. People here are going crazy over it."

At 4 p.m. Tuesday, a dozen customers were in the pub. Two young men were sitting on bar stools near the door staring at beer glasses filled with the liquid.

"The foam looks like last week's soap suds," said one. "It tastes like hell; like watered-down whisky. I don't think he'll sell much of this."

"I'll bet it's a family recipe," said Elsei Janis who works for a hotel in the vicinity. "It tastes like they dropped a 180-year-old Irishman in it." Janis and her friends sent the beverage back, but there are no refunds.

Murphy said the drink is made from malt, hops and corn. "We don't use any chemicals so we don't have to wait for a reaction."

He said it took three days to complete a test batch of 50 gallons. Another 500 gallons will be ready by Saturday.

City police and liquor licensing inspectors said there is nothing they can do because sale of the brew is legal. S.Sgt. Larry Richardson said inspectors have sampled the brew and are satisfied Murphy isn't manufacturing his own brew. Inspectors believe it is bottled beer with a few unknown ingredients added to water it down.

B.C. liquor laws prohibit individual manufacturing of liquor — a beverage with a one per cent or more alcohol content — for public consumption. But sale of bottled beer from the liquor branch — even in a watered-down version — is okay.

B.C. beer drinkers have been scrambling for the stuff since July 26 when the province's three major breweries — Labatt, Molson and Carling O'Keefe — locked out about 1,500 members of the Brewery, Winery and Distillery Workers Union.

There is no end in sight to the shutdown. Labor Minister Jack Heinrich's latest initiative, appointment of an industrial inquiry commissioner, has been turned down by the beweries.

Main issue is wages. The breweries have offered $1 an hour in each year of a three-year contract; the union is seeking $1.05 in each year of a two-year deal.

Alcan will comply with Berger ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada said Tuesday it will comply with a ruling by Justice Thomas Berger of B.C. Supreme Court that the company obey the federal minister of fisheries about water flow in the Nechako River until June 30, 1981.

Alcan spokesman Brian Hemingway said the company is prepared to go along with the expanded order. Berger ruled last week than Alcan had to obey an order from the federal fisheries department to raise water levels in the north-central B.C. river only until Aug. 20.

Fisheries and Oceans Canada wanted the increased flow from the Skins Lake Spillway to protect the Nechako salmon habitat and spawning grounds.

In making the expanded ruling, Berger said: "Given the changes that may occur in the weather and the difficulty of predicting such changes, the minister should be able to vary the directions to Alcan regarding the discharge of water as the need arises. Alcan will have to comply."

He also told fisheries officials to provide Alcan with as much evidence as possible to give the company the chance to evaluate requests and decide if it wishes to launch another court challenge.

Hemingway said Alcan now is releasing double the required 8,000-cubic-feet-a-second amount of water through the spillway.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, former environment minister John Fraser said the federal government still has not indicated it will conduct a full environmental assessment of the $2.5 billion hydroelectric power project in northern B.C. proposed by Alcan.

Fraser said in a written statement Tuesday that the project "is the most extravagant grab at B.C. water resources in several decades" and repeated demands for public hearings into the company's dam building plans.

The former Progressive Conservative government had promised such hearings because of the potential dangers of the two dams to the B.C. fishing and tourism industries.

Fraser, Conservative MP for Vancouver South, also sent letters Tuesday to Environment Minister John Roberts and to Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc urging the government to study the environmental effect of the project.

The company wants to triple its smelting capacity at nearby Kitimat by adding new smelters which would be supplied with electricity from the new watershed in the Kemano region.

Poultry plant could be back in B.C. hands

B.C. turkey producers could eventually gain control of the Maplewood Poultry processing plant, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

He indicated that an Alberta co-operative now trying to buy control of the Abbotsford plant would be willing to let B.C. turkey farmers increase their equity and possibly obtain a majority interest.

His remarks followed a meeting with Wally Berry, manager of Lilydale Co-operative Ltd. of Edmonton, which is trying to buy the Abbotsford plant with the help of $3.5 million in federal aid.

Maplewood, which employed about 135 people, closed more than a month ago after $500,000 from a province-guaranteed loan and $1 million in federal funds had been exhausted to process 55,000 turkeys that had accumulated since the plant was put in receivership this spring.

Nurse shortages

The shortage of nurses in British Columbia and across the country is growing more acute, yet there appears precious little in the way of collective effort by the governments involved to overcome the problem.

In B.C. alone some 400 vacancies exist, 122 of them at Vancouver General Hospital. Hospital beds have closed and the waiting lists for a hospital bed grow longer. Alberta is short 700 nurses and hospitals are attempting to recruit personnel from England and New Zealand. The Canadian Nurses Association says all provinces except Prince Edward Island are experiencing shortages beyond the normal seasonal fluctuations.

The value of nurses and the dismal supply-demand picture is being reflected by healthy wage increases. B.C. nurses recently received a 44 per cent increase over three years and their counterparts in Alberta have just received 38 per cent over two years.

But despite better wages, there is still a wide gap between the number of vacancies and the number of new nursing graduates. It is estimated that the 640 nurses graduating from community colleges, the VGH school of nursing and the University of B.C. will barely satisfy one-third of the demand. In Ontario new registration of nurses has dropped from about 4,000 in 1975 to 3,000 in 1979.

Medical analysts offer several reasons for the declining interest in the profession. The range of job opportunities for women has increased dramatically in the past 10 years. Restricted openings for training in specialized areas of nursing has forced some to look south of the border where in-house training is commonplace. There are also some 100,000 vacancies in the United States, which has brought many hospital staff recruiters from south of the border. And the shortage snowballs when working nurses face the frustrations of practising at a less than desirable standard because staff and money are also in short supply at hospitals.

The fact that most hospitals in B.C. are operated by local associations makes it difficult for the government to make province-wide initiatives. But Victoria, through the health, labor and education ministries, must begin to show some leadership.

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich responded to the shortage of skilled tradesmen with a $14.4 million incentive program for industry to hire apprentices. It is obvious that incentives must be directed to encourage both men and women to enter the nursing profession.

The right number

The control and ownership of telephone systems in Canada have gravitated towards monopoly positions. Most telephone companies operate province wide. The few municipally owned systems in Canada don't provide much in the way of competition.

A recent decision by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission has made a small inroad into that monopoly position. The interim ruling will allow telephone customers in Ontario, Quebec and the Northwest Territories to shop for additional telephone equipment.

Subscribers must still rent their first telephone from Bell Canada but they will be able to purchase extension phones and connect them without paying a $2.50 per month service charge.

Other telephone companies such as B.C. Tel anticipate that the ruling will eventually apply throughout the country. But this is not likely to happen before the CRTC holds public hearings in the spring and the interim decision is ratified.

The big companies may not be happy, but telephone subscribers and the companies who produce telephone accessories have something to look forward to.

Customers will be able to buy rather than rent equipment and they'll probably have a wider choice of units.

Small firms wishing to build and sell telephone equipment will now have the opportunity. And because the telephone companies will probably attempt to keep a share of the equipment market, competition should be intense. The consumer will again benefit.

The only drawback is that the telephone companies may seek rate increases to compensate for any loss of rental fees charged for extension telephones.

We trust that such applications will be rigorously scrutinized by the CRTC.

Big differences to resolve

NEW YORK — Teddy Kennedy, who seems destined to do nothing right in this hapless year, understands, perhaps, the abrupt ending of his candidacy will please no one so much as Jimmy Carter.

He apparently decided on a mercy killing after watching the chilling efficiency of the Carter forces during the four-hour fight on the "open rule," the life-support system that had kept his dying candidacy barely breathing for the past month.

His followers and delegates, even after the crushing 500-vote margin against them, were unprepared for sudden pulling of the plug. They knew, as Jack English of New York, a Kennedy loyalist for 20 years, said, that by swamping Kennedy in the roll call, the convention had "nominated Carter."

Fight on

But they wanted to fight on, to prove the depth of his convictions and theirs, to let Kennedy continue to erase, by his persistence on the issues, the fact that he had entered the race last Nov. 7 on the simple premise that he could win.

The Carter delegates, of course, are not entirely satisfied. By administering the coup de grace to his hopeless effort he had also killed the convention — and made a dog of the most promising drama to open on Broadway in some time.

The more vindictive had doubtless looked forward to the roll call on the nomination that would have ground the last of the Kennedys into the dust.

They were the Carterites who had been invited to the White House, been called by the president, and been made to feel by him that there was nothing mean about being mean to the Kennedys.

But if he deprived the Carterites of a satisfying scrap that they knew they would win, Kennedy also alienated the anti-Carterites who had been scheming and plotting over the weekend to replace the president as the nominee.

This faction included both Kennedy and Carter delegates. Their fantasies had converged around Edmund S. Muskie, the secretary of state.

Kennedy withdrew just two hours too late to help them.

Young sparks in the House, led by Toby Moffett of Connecticut and Tom Downey of New York, had sent word to the senator that he should leave the race and throw his delegates to Muskie.

The transformation of Muskie, the testy contender of 1972, into a benign and reassuring figure, acceptable to liberals and conservatives alike, was one of the surprises of this curious season. It was impossible to go to any caucus or delegation in the steaming convention city without finding a closet Muskie supporter.

But Kennedy would not receive the supplicants. They were fobbed off with meetings with Kennedy political director Paul Kirk, who informed them coldly that the senator "would not budge."

Massachusetts House Speaker Tommy McGee, a Carter delegate, wandered into the Illinois delegation during the roll call on the rule and observed shrewdly, "If they had opened it up, it would be a free-for-all."

The Carter forces did not need, obviously, to organize as fiercely as they did for the Kennedy threat. But they did need to keep a firm grip on delegates whose highest tribute to their candidate is that "he is doing the best he can."

So they crushed the rebellion in a petty and overbearing way that left bruises and possibly, scars.

Whether they heal depends on the success of compromise efforts, particularly on planks dealing with economic policy. As recently as last Friday, Kennedy was likening Carter's economic programs to those of Republican Herbert Hoover, under whose administration the Great Depression occured.

The senator in his concession statement said Monday evening he "will speak to the convention about the economic concerns that have been the heart of my campaign." And he urged delegates to "stand with me for a truly Democratic platform."

Job creation

A platform satisfactory to both sides will not be easy to achieve. For instance, Kennedy is pushing for a plank commiting the party to a $12 billion federal jobs program. White House aides have criticized the proposal as inflationary.

Hamilton Jordon, Carter's campaign chairman, conceeded that it may not be possible to find the middle ground on some issues.

Citing Kennedy's opposition to development of the MX missile system as an example, Jordon said, "There are some major differences between Senator Kennedy and President Carter. I'm not sure those differences can be resolved by language (cosmetic changes)."

Business fights new controls

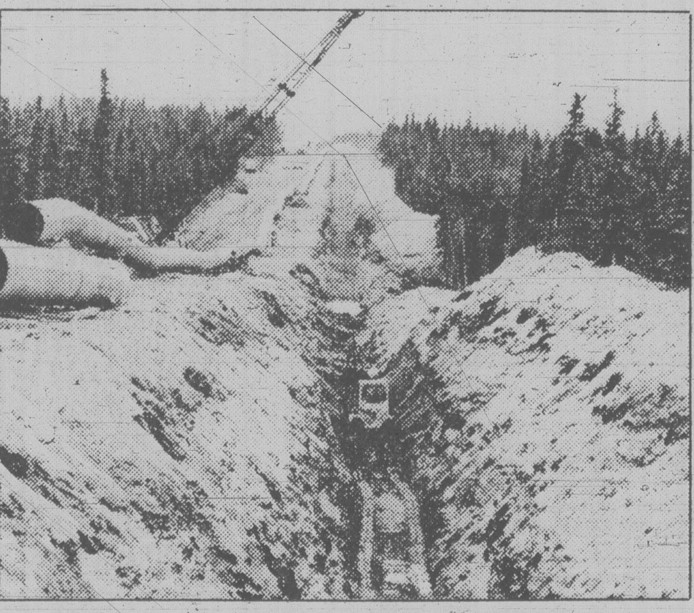
OTTAWA — Beneath the calm which envelopes Parliament Hill, one of the fiercest battles ever fought between the federal government and the business community is taking shape.

Industry Minister Herb Gray is preparing to introduce a bill this fall that would make it tougher for foreign companies to operate in Canada. Meanwhile, big business is making plans to summon all the money and muscle at its command to try and stop him.

For several weeks cabinet has been debating a set of strict new regulations drawn up by Gray.

Already, big business — with its sharp ears in the capital — has heard enough to know it doesn't like the tone of the cabinet discussion.

Both sides knew a confrontation was coming.



Industry needs foreign money, but Ottawa worries investors

FIRA hated

The corporate world has been watching Trudeau apprehensively ever since he announced, last February, that a Liberal government would expand the powers of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, (FIRA), the watchdog body which scrutinizes all bids by foreigners to do business in Canada. Few organizations in Ottawa are so widely hated by businessmen as the meddlesome seven-year-old FIRA.

The nervousness intensified in April when Trudeau pledged in his Speech from the Throne not only to be tougher on foreign takeover proposals, but also to be more vigilant in monitoring the activities of the large foreign-owned companies already in Canada.

"The Foreign Investment Review Act will be amended to provide for performance reviews of how large foreign firms are meeting the test of bringing substantial benefits to Canada," he announced.

The moment they heard the term "performance review," businessmen flinched, visualizing a Big Brother watching over their shoulder — nosing through their books, demanding that they fill out yet more annoying government forms.

"This could mean all those firms which have been here for years minding their own business would be swept into this net," explained Sam Hughes, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in an interview Monday.

The chamber and its equally powerful brother, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, immediately shot off letters of protest and sent their spokesman to Ottawa to appeal to Gray to reconsider the plan. Hundreds of individual businessmen expressed their personal dissatifaction.

"Potentially, what they're saying to business is — not only do you have a gun pointed at you, but the gun is loaded," said Hughes.

"They'd be gathering information so they can pull the trigger and make you perform in ways that you — in your wisdom — have judged to be inappropriate."

Many businessmen fear their protests are falling on deaf ears. Only one member of Trudeau's 33-member cabinet has ever run his own business — Trade Minister Ed Lumley, Gray's second-in-command. The rest are lawyers, academics, farmers and professionals.

So the business community has spent the summer lobbying not only Gray, but his officials, their MPs and anyone else in Ottawa who will listen.

So far, the government has offered only two clear indications of the shape the new legislation will take:

Whenever a foreign company makes a takeover bid, the government will publicize its offer as widely as possible in the hopes of attracting a competing one from a Canadian company.

If a potential Canadian buyer can be found, the government will provide financial assistance.

What remains unclear is where the government will find the millions of dollars needed to finance such an ambitious program. Another missing puzzle piece is whether Canadians themselves have the massive investment pool needed to get the huge energy and construction developments of the future off the ground.

The business community answers with an emphatic, worried no.

But its voice is not the only one cabinet must heed. The country's economic nationalists warn that the task of buying back the country is becoming bigger and costlier by the day. They insist the time for action is now.

Economists split

The country's economists are divided — some wondering how much longer Canada can bear the $9 billion annual outflow in foreign interest payments and dividends, others convinced the country needs foreign capital to supply jobs, economic growth and the standard of living Canadians have come to expect.

Canada itself is split; the resource-rich West looking eagerly to the United States for money to develop its oil and gas, the East suspicious that huge multinationals mean soaring prices and staggering profits.

Cabinet is in a quandary. Pulled between their party's brave election promises and the dire warnings of the business community, Trudeau's beleaguered ministers have plenty to contemplate before August's sun gives way to the chill of autumn.

Tradition material

Recently while visting Victoria I saw the show about Emily Carr — "The Wonder of it All" in the Newcombe Theatre. I went with much skepticism, knowing it to be a local subject, "small town" talent and Canadian written. I was amazed at the professional acting and singing, the stage props were fantastic, and the music kept me humming for days.

As a former Victoria, it makes one very proud to come from the same Victoria that produced this excellent musical. Emily Carr is a very important part of B.C. and it's nice to see her life portrayed so expressively. As "Anne of Green Gables" is to P.E.I., so "The Wonder of it All" should be to B.C. I hope this show becomes a tradition every year for Victoria. — Barb Dunstan, R.R. 2, Peircy Rd., Courtenay.

Alcohol troubles

I have just finished reading an unbelievable article in the Times which states, "there may be privately owned wine shops in B.C. within six months, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen indicated." The article also states this is the next step in the government's program to relax liquor regulations. If this step is taken, then this Social Credit government has once again demonstrated its disregard for the health and well-being of its citizens.

Is this government aware of the fact that the per capita ratio of alcoholic and chemically addicted people in B.C. is the highest in Canada? Would the ministry responsible (health) care to state exactly what percentage of tax revenues from the sale of beverage alcohol in B.C. finds its way to all phases of treatment in the province? Or is that figure so small it might prove embarrasing?

Returning to the subject of privately owned wine stores, has the minister responsible thought of the consequences of making beverage alcohol far more easy to obtain? Has he, or anyone responsible in the government thought of consulting any of the thousands of people who will be directly affected by such thoughtless action? How about those working in the judicial, enforcement or corrections branches? What of the doctors and nurses who will be dealing with the consequences of more alcohol-related illnesses and accidents? How about the children of an alcoholic parent or two, the defenceless ones who suffer physical and emotional abuse? But, of course, their voices aren't heard. — William Greenhalgh, 424-531 West Bay Terrace, Victoria.

Right-on Rafe

May I offer a tip of the hat to the Honorable Rafe Mair for his definite ban on smoking in the Blanchard Building.

The extraordinary point of the whole excercise is the fact that the staff would not have seen the necessity of the move as a matter of health, efficiency, and public relations and would have acted on their own initiative, without being asked.

What could be more incongruous than to enter a building, dedicated to public health, and given a demonstration of the exact opposite by a steno gasping on a cigarette.

Personally, when I see an employee sucking on a cigarette, it somehow conveys an impression of a somewhat dubious business operation. — J. Eric Sowerby, 9884 5th Street, Sidney.

Keep monarchy

I am appalled to read in today's Times that as many as 45 per cent of the people of this province wish to dispense with our most gracious Queen as Head of State. What have they got against Her Majesty? Is it simply because she was not born in Canada? As Canada is an English-speaking nation in the British Commonwealth and empire, she is our sovereign in accordance with our Constitution. Whom would they have in her place? Is there a Canadian of royal blood who could take her place as Queen of Canada? Or would we prefer a president, as they have across the border? God forbid.

A president, however good a person he may be, is a party man, but a royal monarch is above politics and represents the nation as a whole. Also, a president is 'here today and gone tomorrow', whereas a royal monarch is trained for rulership from childhood. Our Queen is loved and respected wherever she goes, and is the nation's best ambassador. She is one of the best rulers this century has yet produced, and there's many a country on both sides of the Iron Curtain which would be only too glad to have Her Majesty, or someone like her, as its ruler.

No, let us retain Her Majesty as our sovereign. We are indeed very fortunate in having her as our Head of State, so we have nothing at all to complain about. — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

War wagon

The U.S. is planning to place NATO missles in Europe that can reach and destroy even underground installations and shelters within four minutes, and cruise missles that could also strike without warning. To proceed with these planned installations could invite a first strike by the other side, before these missles can become operative, which in turn, would embroil every NATO country in nuclear war.

Canada could influence NATO against this war provoking move. We do not have to join the dance of death. We should all rise above barbarism, get off the war wagon and cultivate tolerance, understanding, friendship and communication, as becomes civilized people. — Anne Johanson, Vananda, B.C.

Japan, Germany battle on trade

By BRADLEY GRAHAM
The Washington Post

Japanese products cracking German market

DUSSELDORF, West Germany — Downtown, in this West German city of executive suites, the Japanese have built an office centre that rises like an architectural jigsaw in angles of glass, slices of granite and layers of aluminum.

The structure was designed to get the Japanese and West Germans under one roof. They have not, and their failure to do so has become symptomatic of other, larger strains developing between these two great postwar trading powers.

Put up two years ago to house both Japanese and West German firms in equal proportion, the centre was supposed to be a sort of monument to the friendship between the world's new economic miracle cultures. It was named the German-Japanese Centre.

But few Germans ever took up the offer of residency. Today, only five per cent of the building is occupied by West German tenants.

"This is actually a Japanese centre," said Hideo Mizumoto, president of Marubeni's West German subsidiary, the trading company that paid $120 million for the eight-storey building.

The rent, about two or three times the cost of neighboring office space, turned out to be too expensive for West German company budgets. Besides, the centre's frills — it is air-conditioned — and its expansive design simply didn't appeal to conservative German corporate tastes.

West German corporations find that they differ increasingly with the Japanese in economic matters, too.

Although politically they are still on very friendly terms — both nations share an avowed belief in laying claim to everyone else's market — West Germany and Japan are coming closer to serious economic blows, as competition increases with one another on their own home turfs.

The Japanese especially have begun to target West Germany, and Europe generally, by penetrating certain markets with a ferocity that matches their assault on the American economy in the 1970s.

Japanese products accounted for 2.7 per cent — roughly $4.2 billion — of West Germany's total imports last year. But this relatively small number masks the fact that Japan's footholds in West Germany rest in some of the fastest growing markets.

About two-thirds of all tape recorders and dictating machines in West Germany, for example, are made in Japan. The same is true of 3 out of 5 watches, 4 out of 5 pocket calculators, half of the portable television sets, most cameras and nearly all transistor radios.

West German auto-makers, as well, have looked on with deepened angst as Japanese models for the first time took more than five per cent of the market last year, then accelerated past the eight per cent mark early this year.

In an unusual appeal in March, West German electronics manufacturers asked the Bonn government to impose restrictions against Japanese imports.

The government rejected the request. Among the major European trading nations, West Germany traditionally has been the most resistant to calls for trade barriers against the Japanese. As one Bonn economics official said, "We have historically taken a liberal trade attitude because we are ourselves so dependent on trade."

Nevertheless, the pressure on Bonn is growing.

This quickening battle between America's two chief economic rivals might give U.S. observers certain pleasure. Both nations were, after all, rebuilt with U.S. assistance after the Second World War and since have come back to challenge American firms in world markets.

Their economics, distinguished by relatively low inflation and unemployment, are often singled out as examples of what to do right — keep money tight, encourage investment, discourage credit, promote friendly labor-management relations — against what Americans have been doing wrong.

While the economic policies of West Germany and Japan are similar, however, the way they do business is often very different. What they have most in common are success and an overriding confidence in their own abilities.

The largest concentration of Japanese businessmen and their families are in Europe — about 4,500 representing 240 firms — is headquartered here in Dusseldorf. That is not much in a city of 1.2 million people, but the Japanese have made themselves noticed, giving rise to such nicknames for Dusseldorf as "Little Tokyo on the Rhine."

The German-Japanese friendship dates back to the last century when Japan, opening doors to the West, took interest in German philosophy, law, medicine and art. Their World War II alliance reinforced the old ties and this has carried over to today.

"The Japanese prefer to work with Germans over Americans. The traditional friendship is still there," observed Herbert te Kloot, Dusseldorf's laison to the Japanese community.

Throwback to dark ages

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
The Vancouver Sun

William R. Bennett and friends have really gone too far this time.

After regaining power, the Socreds reintroduced into this province some 17th century legislation extending the right to vote in municipal elections on the basis of ownership of land. (The New Democratic Party, during its brief tenure in office, had expunged that throwback to the Dark Ages.)

Now Mr. Bennett is proposing to further violate one of the most sacrosanct principles of this or any other modern democracy, which holds a man's right to vote should not be based on wealth or social or business standing.

Amendments to the Municipal Act introduced into the legislature last week by Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm would extend to certain businessmen in this province the right to vote in a municipality where they rent office space but do not live. I know, it boggles the mind.

Extending enfranchisement on the basis of land ownership is bad enough, but further stretching this questionable principles to include businesses on the ground that they have rented a cubicle in a commercial building in a municipality is sheer lunacy.

At present corporate owners of land in the city of Vancouver as well as other municipalities throughout the province can cast votes in two municipalities.

For example, a West Vancouver resident who owns a land-holding corporation in the municipality of Victoria can vote twice — once in Victoria and once in West Vancouver.

Again, that is bad enough. But Mr. Vander Zalm's new bill is downright offensive. It will also allow two votes to, for example, a self-incorporated dentist who lives in Vancouver but practises in rented office space in West Vancouver.

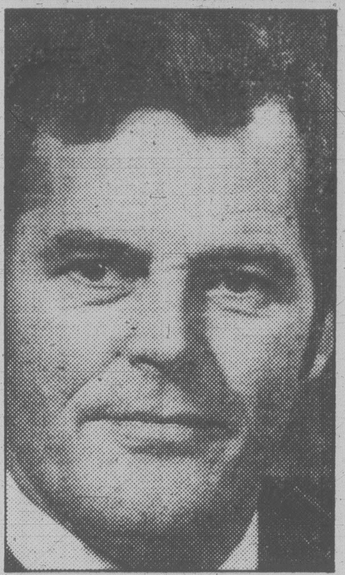
The reason that is so offensive to our system of government is that the dental hygienist who works for that dentist and also travels from one municipality to another to live and work is not given the same right to vote twice.

What you have to ask yourself, once more, is why? Why would this government, which is already wallowing around in alligator-infested swamps, do this to itself?

The only apparent rationale is that Mr. Bennett is genuinely concerned that his friend, His Honor Jack Volrich, may go down to defeat in this fall's civic elections in Vancouver.

The demise of the sympathetic Volrich administration in Vancouver could bring the rest of premier's house of cards tumbling down. The election to the mayor's chair of Mike Harcourt, an NDP supporter, would jeopardize Mr. Bennett's little fair known as Transpo 86.

Mr. Harcourt has already announced that he is opposed to the staging of the Transpo extravaganza. The still-birth of Transpo would in turn jeopardize the premier's entire grand vision for False Creek, including that multi-million-dollar covered stadium.



VANDER ZALM . . . why?

So far, the City of Vancouver is the only municipality not covered by the odious amendments introduced by Mr. Vander Zalm. That would require the introduction of parallel changes to the Vancouver charter.

No doubt those changes will be bootlegged into some innocuous-looking bill within the next week or so. At Vancouver city hall the deputy city solicitor said he had no knowledge of such draft amendments to the charter, but he confirmed that in the past the legislature in Victoria has always sought to ensure that the same basic provisions apply in Vancouver as in other municipalities throughout the province.

To repeat, that is the only scenario that makes sense. Any attempt to estimate the precise effect of such voting eligibility changes in Vancouver would be sheer guesstimate at this point. But suffice to say that the inevitable result would be that come voting day this fall the city of Vancouver would have several thousand more eligible voters on its lists.

You can also speculate with some certainty that most of those additional thousands of voters would not be NDP supporters. Charles Barber, the astute New-Democratic MLA for Victoria, thinks that up to 10,000 business renters who do not live in the city of Vancouver could be added to the voter's list.

His guess is as good as any. There are some 30,000 business-licence holders in Vancouver, most of whom rent office space. Many of them are businessmen-renters who live in other municipalities abutting the city.

The concept that anyone — doctors, lawyers, dentists, or the owner of a mom-and-pop corner store — should be entitled to an extra vote by virtue of his business and rental status is clearly preposterous.

If this is not a bill dedicated to the salvation of Jack Volrich, it makes no sense whatever. Governments draft legislation to correct or improve laws, and they inevitably do so in response to argument, or lobbying if you like.

For example, racehorse owners want a larger grant, so they troop to Victoria to make a case. Well now, when have you heard of an aggrieved businessman who occupied rented quarters in one municipality and lived in another demanding the right to vote in both?

Exactly. There has been no such demand. But we must give the government the benefit of the doubt until such time as their true intentions have been spelled out. Maybe there is simply a demented legislative drafter running amuck through the government printing bureau. Maybe when some of the distinguished Social Credit lawyers have an opportunity to reread this outrage they will rise up as one and demand its withdrawal. Maybe.

In a previous life . . .

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — The way I see it, I wasn't anybody you ever heard of in a previous life. This confession is prompted by a conversation with a woman at dinner not long ago. "I have the feeling I've known you in a previous life," she said. "Were you ever a duke at the Court of Louis XIV?"

It seemed improbable, considering my difficulties speaking French; it would have taken more than 300 years for a duke's accent to deteriorate until it was as bad as mine. "Perhaps," the woman suggested, "you were a high priest during the reign of the Pharaoh Amenhotep." This woman apparently travelled only in the fanciest circles as she journeyed from life to life.

For all that, she didn't seem to have gone anyplace much. Oh, she may have danced with a pharaoh and powdered her wig at Versailles, but in all these lives she had stayed Earthbound, never able to escape this obscure little planet out here in a dim corner of the universe. I believe this is my first time on this planet, though you can never be too sure of these things, memory being as tricky as it is. I first heard of the place around 1916, 1917, sometime like that, speaking in Earthly calendar terms, of course.

At the time, I was still eight or nine years from being born and had been barreling through the cosmos on a celestial version of the Wabash Cannonball when we stopped at a main junction depot about 10 galaxies west of here. I got off to stretch my atoms and odd bits of plasma — there wasn't much more to me then — and noticed an old gentleman in galluses, carrying a rifle, waiting on the platform for the outbound express.

He was my great-grandfather who had died 10 years earlier and was outward bound. "Where you headed, boy?" he asked.

"Some pipsqueak planet called Earth out in the boondocks."

"Well, you can't win 'em all," the old gentleman said. "I just been there myself. A mighty long spell, too. Eighty-seven Earth years. Just died 10 years ago. Feared they meant to send me around a second time as a hobo in that there Depression they've got coming up in a few years, but I was lucky."

Indeed he was. He was being assigned to the luscious strawberries-and-cream planet in Galaxy 217-30-4295, where people get born as beautiful hot-air balloons and spend their lives floating over the sapphire valleys playing the cello and writing poetry.

"What's that tool you're lugging?" I asked.

"A gun," he said. On Earth, he had been a gunsmith. Naturally, I had never heard of guns. "They shoot things," he said. "Tin cans sitting on fence posts, apples sitting on small boys' heads, and so on. Looks kind of foolish out here in the cosmos," he went on, "but after you're born on Earth, it comes in mighty handy and you get attached to it."

Just then there was a whoosh, followed by a spray of light. "The Eastern Galaxy's express is now ready for boarding on track 29," said a disembodied voice. "That's my connection," said Great-Granddaddy. "She takes 8,000 years to get to the strawberries-and-cream planet, but when she pulls in I'll become a beautiful hot-air balloon."

"Could I have your gun?" I asked. "I'm due to be born in just eight or nine years, and nobody will believe I met you out here unless I've got some evidence to prove it."

"Boy," he said, "if you can work out a way to be born with a gun in your hand, welcome to it. They'll probably put your face on their postage stamps." He was off in a whoosh and a spray of light, but I noticed that another passenger who had been waiting nearby did not board the express.

Instead, when the Earth local pulled in he got aboard and sat down beside me. In Earthy fashion he started telling everything about himself, how he had died on Earth in 1905 and been assigned to the planet of velvet doors in the 58th Galaxy, how he had learned the trick of outwitting the authorities and getting back to Earth each time he died simply by hopping on the Earth local every time at this depot junction.

"Don't you ever want to go someplace new and be a beautiful hot-air balloon or a gorgeous velvet door for a change?" I asked.

Not him. There was no place for him but Earth. There wasn't another planet in the universe where you could go out to dinner and have such a good time dropping names like Nebuchadnezzar, with whom he had once dined in Babylon, or the Pharaoh Ramses, who had once waved to him from camel-back, or Louis XIV, or President McKinley, who had once nodded to his wife in the life just concluded.

It sounded so tedious that I changed the subject by asking him how my gun worked. He lifted it and shot a passing comet. The outraged conductor asked to see his ticket, then had the train stopped while transferring him to the express to the Galaxy of Lavender Trees for rebirth as a gentle spring shower.

Due to the delay, I was a year late in being born, but nobody since has ever asked me if he didn't once see me dancing in the Hanging Gardens of Babylon.

New York

Stock prices were steady in fairly active trading today, struggling back from a steep selloff in the previous session.

The widely watched blue chip index fell about two points in the early going, climbed back to a two-point gain by early afternoon then slipped again.

Analysts viewed the market's partial recovery as a continuation of forces which have helped push the market to its highest levels in years recently.

Those include a belief that the recession may have touched bottom and a view that stocks are relatively more attractive in the face of a decline in rates on interest bearing investments.

Warner Lambert, unchanged at $20½, topped the NYSE most active list in afternoon trading. Sony which added 1½ points in active trading Tuesday fell back ⅜ to $11⅝.

Among other actively traded issues, Storage Technologies gained 1⅛ to $19⅜; American Telephone and Telegraph added ⅜ to $53½ and UAL dropped ½ to $22⅜.

London

The London stock market was lower near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 5.1 to 475.5.

Golds firmed but industrials were lower.

Canadian stocks eased.

Fraser fishery closed again

VANCOUVER (CP) — There has been another set-back for B.C. salmon fishermen, already reeling from the effects of poor catches this year.

The International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission decided Tuesday to keep the Fraser River fishery closed at least through this week. The move follows disappointing results from a 24-hour opening that ended at 8 a.m. PDT Tuesday.

The opening was allowed after earlier tests indicated a larger number of salmon was on the way than was first anticipated.

But commission spokesman Al Cooper said the catch was far below expectations and no more openings will be permitted until sufficient salmon escapement from the Fraser River is ensured.

The commission will meet again Friday to consider next week's fishery.

Meanwhile, B.C. halibut fishermen are experiencing a good year and will likely exceed last year's total of 5.1 million pounds for the third season, which opened Tuesday.

Dick Mhyre, assistant director of the International Pacific Halibut Commission, said in Seattle the Canadian fishermen have landed 3.3 million pounds of halibut in the first two seasons so far this year.

He said the Canadian quota for the third season this year is 6.1 million pounds, a slightly better split that was allowed Canadians last year.

If the quota is not reached by the end of the third season, Aug. 26, a fourth period may be allowed, starting Sept. 9.

Canadian fishermen didn't reach their quota last year because of overfishing by American fishermen when quotas were reduced as a conservation measure. The U.S. quota of 3.2 million pounds in area 2 was taken in the first fishering period of this year.

Canadians usually get a 60-40 split of the quota in area 2, from Cape Spencer, off the Alaska Panhandle, to the California coast. But they were allowed fractionally more to balance last year's shortfall.

In Delta, meanwhile, a salmon seiner registered in Washington state was held overnight by federal fisheries officials following a report it had been seen fishing in Canadian waters near Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver.

Authorities gave no additional details, and withheld the name of the vessel and its operator.

Another Washington state seiner spotted in the same area was sent back to U.S. waters.

Offers in duplicate for beauty winners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Teenaged twin sisters from Selkirk, Man., who won a Los Angeles beauty contest as a single entry, say they have already been offered modelling and advertising auditions.

"Everything is so fast out here and it will be hard to keep it up for a long time," an excited Shelley Buffie said Tuesday, 24 hours after she and sister Sherrey won the Miss International Beauty title over 52 other contestants.

"But if we want to do it badly enough, I know we can," Shelley, 19, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

The sisters are returning home to mull over their career possibilities.

"But if we decide L. A. and Hollywood are the places for us, we'll hop back on a plane and start working," Shelley said.

It was in the bag, and then . . .

By PAUL MINVIELLE

How could post office lose track of $18,000 in cheques?

Tom Corbett has had it with the post office.

The owner of Corbett Floor Coverings at 4087 Quadra Street, Corbett is now seriously considering using a courier service to deliver cheques to his suppliers.

That way, he'd at least be able to raise a ruckus if the cheques weren't delivered. He might even get his money back, which is more than the post office has offered in this latest case of rain or sleet or hail or something messing up a mail delivery.

It started in early June as Corbett prepared for a vacation in his native Scotland.

He usually pays his suppliers on the 15th of each month, but as he was going to be out of the country he made out all the cheques early and gave them to Mike Read, his assistant manager.

On June 16, Darlene Ell, the company secretary, handed the bundle of 20 envelopes containing $18,444.25 worth of cheques to Rod, the regular postman.

Subsequently, Rod was to tell Corbett Floor Coverings that he had put the mail into a bag on the wall at Postal Station A on West Saanich Road, the same bag into which all such collected mail goes.

As Corbett was to later suggest, the mail went into the bag and into oblivion.

A week after the mail had been handed over, a phone call came from one of the companies which should have received a cheque. Accustomed to receiving a cheque from Corbett soon after the 15th, the supplier wondered where the June cheque was.

Read said the cheque was in the mail, and would they please call when they received it.

A few days later the same company called back and said the cheque hadn't arrived.

By this time letters had begun to arrive from other companies on the list, reminding Corbett Floor Coverings their June payments were overdue.

Read asked Ell to call other companies on the list which hadn't been heard from to find out if they'd received their cheques.

Not a single cheque had been delivered.

Read called the main post office and talked to a Mr. Young. Read says Young lectured him, telling him he wasn't supposed to hand mail to a postman but should have dropped it into a mailbox.

The man said he couldn't help anyway, and when Read asked to speak to someone higher up, the man replied, "There is no one higher up."

Even before Read could protest, Young reportedly replied, "I'm sorry. Thanks for calling."

Click.

Now nervous about the whereabouts of the cheques, Read went to the bank and put a stop payment order on all of them, at a cost of $1.50 each.

Corbett returned to Victoria July 19 to find incoming letters from suppliers demanding payment.

First, he arranged to have a new batch of cheques made out and sent to his suppliers.

Then he tried to figure out where the cheques had gone.

He first contacted Arthur Little at the main post office, and although Little was polite he wasn't able to help much.

Then Corbett talked to a Mr. Ball at Postal Station A.

"He said he'd get back to me," Corbett said. "He never did."

The Times contacted Little and when asked if any progress had been made in the case, he replied, "No. Not that I know of. We never did locate those.".

"I'm afraid there's nothing I can tell you," Little said. "It's still under investigation."

"When something comes up we'll notify the customer."

Corbett says he's not holding his breath. A single cheque went missing in the mails last year, so this isn't the first time and Corbett doesn't think he'd want to go through it all again.

And he's not sure his customers really believe his story. Some have phoned wanting to know if his company is in financial difficulty.

"All because those so-and-so's lost my mail."

Read and Corbett with mail that's probably going by courier from now on

HEU staff returning to work

Hospital Employees Union staff and clerical workers started returning to work Tuesday after a week-long sit-in at union offices in Victoria, Vancouver, Kelowna and Prince George.

The 28 HEU members started job action last Wednesday as a result of a lengthy contract dispute.

They would not disclose settlement terms but one employee commented: "Ours is a unique relationship and it required a unique solution."

Hornby lodge on block

Tribune Bay Lodge on four acres of Hornby Island upland will be sold later this year by public tender, Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot said Tuesday.

The lodge and 73 acres of prime parkland was bought by the government and the Devonian Foundation in 1978 and a park established at Tribune Bay.

Included in the lodge sale are a wash house, sleeping cabins and water system. No waterfront land will be sold.

Firemen felled while sharing oxygen masks

Three city firemen were hospitalized for smoke inhalation and half a dozen others were treated at the scene when they shared their air masks with tenants fleeing a $100,000 fire in the basement of a high-rise apartment block early today.

Fireman Fred Beadle, 35, who was overcome by smoke in a hallway of the 13-storey Princess Patricia apartments, 701 Esquimalt, is in stable condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Another fireman, Hans Rudwaleit, 40, was kept in hospital overnight and the third, Stuart Hemmings, 26, who collapsed in the Bay Street fire hall after fighting the fire, was released after treatment.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson called the firemen's actions courageous and selfless.

"They put the safety of others ahead of themselves."

The fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. in a locker room in the basement of the building.

Severson said the heat and smoke activated the apartment's fire alarm system but most of the tenants apparently ignored the ringing bells.

"I think it was a case of people beginning to cry wolf," said Severson, adding there have been several false alarms in the building over the years.

By the time firemen arrived, smoke had spread up through the first seven floors and tenants were stumbling through hallways trying to get out.

Severson said the smoke was thick and firemen had to share their air masks with tenants as they guided them to safety.

About three tenants as well as six or seven firemen required treatment at the scene for smoke inhalation.

The building was evacuated while firemen fought the blaze, confining it to the locker room.

The tenants were allowed to return to their suites at 3:30 a.m.

A team of investigators is trying to determine the cause.

Severson noted it was the second apartment locker fire in recent months. The previous one, at 2136 Ridge Road on June 28, caused about $8,000 damage and was started, firemen believe, by careless smoking.

"The dangers are always there," said Severson. "It's a place just waiting for a fire to start."

Indians trot out treaty

Members of the Tsawout Indian band have invoked a 150-year-old treaty to stop a proposed marina from being built in Saanichton Bay.

They claim the treaty, signed by Sir James Douglas, gave them total fishing rights to the area and say a marina, proposed by Saanichton Marina Ltd., would harm fish stocks.

But Mayor Dave Hill of Central Saanich says a study undertaken four years ago indicated a marina would not necessarily harm the environment.

The area has been zoned for a marina since 1967 and the community plan adopted last year allows for such a use.

Council has referred the matter to the attorney-general's ministry.

FUTURE FISHERMAN Shaun Gray gets a line on the latest in salmon enhancement work at Mayfair Mall display which will run until Saturday. Shaun and his mother, Mrs. Bruce Gray, 3950 Reynolds Court, were among thousands who took break in shopping to view the environment ministry display which features live fish, slide shows, movies and video tape productions showing fish management techniques. Salmonid Enhancement Program aims to double fish population in B.C. rivers.

Pain eased on surtax

The provincial government has amended the Urban Transit Authority Act to overcome inequities in the new surtax on hydro bills which helps pay for urban transit.

Regulations in the current act drew protests from some homeowners and a large number of businesses unhappy about how the fee was imposed by local governments.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday the power levy charged against residential units now will be a stipulated amount on a per unit basis rather than on a per meter basis.

A number of residences were being charged for more than one meter.

"When the municipalities imposed the power levy to raise funds to cover their share of the urban transit operation deficit, it was not understood that a very significant number of residences had more than one hydro meter," Vander Zalm said in a news release.

The amendment also provides that businesses are charged on a basis of a percentage of electricity usage with a maximum and minimum sum.

Woman seriously injured

A 24-year-old Saanich woman is in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries received when struck by a car in front of her home on Boleskine Road Tuesday night.

Saanich police said the woman, whose name has not been released pending notification of next-of-kin, emerged from the rear of a parked car and was walking across the road when hit.

Police attached no fault to the driver of the car whose name has also been withheld.

He likes trains, cruise ships

Victoria businessman Ken Showers, who ran the Colwood train and came within a whisker of owning the Princess Marguerite, now wants to buy a cruise ship — and run the customers up to Duncan on a new excursion train.

"Both these projects are possible if there is public support for the ideas," he said today.

"We need the co-operation of CP Rail if we want to run an excursion train but they are cool to the idea. They say there is no demand for it, so why bother?

"I want to prove they are wrong."

His train plan is to buy five 1930 passenger coaches and hire CP Rail to pull them back and forth between Victoria and Duncan on the E & N.

"A private organization would operate the train and would pay the CPR for its services. I know it would be a success, especially if package tours are arranged,"

Showers has also done background studies on the feasibility of buying the Prince George cruise ship from a Portland group and run year-around cruises from Victoria and Vancouver.

"The CN built the Prince George in Victoria in 1948 and regularly ran cruises north. A Portland group bought her on speculation and they have kept her in good condition."

The price tag for renovations and first year of operation is under $4 million, he said.

Showers hopes to run the Prince George from Victoria to Alaska in the summer months. During spring and fall she would go on shorter tours up the B.C. coast.

"In the winter the Prince George could become a party ship. She would be available for two or three-day trips south or for weekend excursions from Victoria, Vancouver or Seattle.

"All these things are possible if the community wants them."

Showers operated a tourist train from Colwood on CN track during the early 1970s but went out of business because the CN wanted to abandon the line in order to collect a federal subsidy.

In 1974 the CPR agreed to sell him the Princess Marguerite for $1.2 million. Just before the deal was completed the NDP government stepped in and bought the vessel.

"When Social Credit formed a government I tried to buy the Marguerite from them but they weren't interested in selling. I'm sure they're not interested in selling her now."

Showers said private enterprise can successfully operate tourist enterprises like cruise ships and excursion trains but there has to be evidence of community support before companies and investors will get interested in the projects.

Rapp turns bitter as Lions whipped

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders physically whipped the usually rough British Columbia Lions in the trenches Tuesday night and scored an easy 24-7 Canadian Football League victory that left the two clubs tied for second place in the western conference.

"When you get your asses whipped like we got ours whipped up front there's not much you can do about it," said Lions' coach Vic Rapp with a touch of bitterness.

"Our left tackle (Tom Humphrey) might as well have stayed home."

The Stampeders, recovering after a couple of early-season stumbles, not only beat the Lions on the scoreboard before 34,393 spectators — the largest Calgary crowd this season — but knocked out two of their key players with injuries.

Running back Leo Sloan left the game in the first half with suspected torn knee ligaments and quarterback Joe Paopao was knocked out early in the fourth quarter with a shoulder injury. However, early examination indicated the injury to Paopao may not be serious.

"I've never been involved with a team with such unbelievably bad luck," lamented Rapp. "It's so demoralizing . . . one of those things, you can only overcome it for so long."

Both clubs had their problems getting the offence moving in the first half. Calgary had a 3-0 first-quarter lead on J.T. Hay's first of three field goals. The Stampeders led 13-7 at the half after a six-yard touchdown run by James Sykes, a convert and field-goal by Hay and B.C.'s only touchdown of the game, a 39-yard reception by Al Charuk that Lui Passaglia converted.

Calgary quarterback Ken Johnson, who mixed his passing and rushing offence almost equally, found Willie Armstead wide open in the end zone for a six-yard touchdown strike at 4:11 of the third quarter. That gave Calgary a 20-7 margin and the Lions were never in the game after that.

"The key factor was when we came out in the third quarter and scored," said Calgary coach Ardell Wiegandt. "In the two previous games we got beat in the second half. This time we went out there prepared to play aggressive ball."

That aggressiveness kept British Columbia quarterbacks under pressure all night and prevented the Lions from capitalizing on a couple of turnovers.

The only time the Lions threatened to score in the second half came after Paopao's replacement, Roy Dewalt, marched B.C. to the Calgary 15-yard-line. A Stampeder offside penalty made it first-and-five at the 10 but the Lions couldn't get a first down in three tries and had to hand the ball over Calgary.

"That was the biggest thing that helped our defence, the goal-line stand," said Wiegandt. "We've been having trouble stopping teams. But from then on, defensively we got stronger and stronger."

It wasn't only the defence that got stronger. The offence also began to take over, sparked by the running and pass catching of Sykes. The leading rusher in the CFL with 691 yards in six games ran for 149 yards on 23 carries Tuesday and caught three passes for 60 yards.

Many of his runs, including his touchdown scamper, were keyed by blocks from Willie Burden, holder of the CFL's single-season rushing record that Sykes appears to have a shot at this season.

Sykes had about 65 yards in the first half but a slight change in the offensive plays created more opportunities for him in the final half.

"In the second half we eliminated some of our plays," explained Sykes.

The Stampeders, 3-3, and the Lions, 3-2, are both two points back of Edmonton Eskimos.

Fill-in quarterback fills bill for Riders

MONTREAL (CP) — Less than two weeks ago, Jordan Case was busy hitting the books at summer school in Texas. Tuesday night, he was hitting his receivers and leading Ottawa Rough Riders to a 27-17 Canadian Football League victory over Montreal Alouettes.

A late cut by the Riders just prior to the regular season, Case was flown in from Texas to serve as backup quarterback to Charlie Weatherbie.

Weatherbie, filling in for the injured Condredge Holloway, started against the Alouettes but was lifted by head coach George Brancato late in the third quarter with the Riders trailing 17-10.

When the game ended, Case had completed two of three passes for 51 yards, including a 17-yard go-ahead TD toss to running back Jim Reid, and orchestrated another TD drive that clinched the victory.

The triumph evened Ottawa's won-lost record at 3-3 and vaulted the Riders into a first-place tie with Toronto Argonauts.

Montreal fell to 2-3 and remained tied with Hamilton Tiger-Cats for last place.

Tony Gabriel, who scored Ottawa's first touchdown at 8:49 of the second quarter to tie the game 7-7, extended his incredible consecutive-games reception record to 113.

Running back Richard Crump had the other Ottawa TD, while kicker Gerry Organ converted all three and booted field goals of 14 and 13 yards.

Running back Skip Walker and tight end Peter Dalla Riva, who suffered a dislocated shoulder in the final quarter, scored Montreal's touchdowns. Kicker Don Sweet converted both and added a 25-yard field goal.

Bjorn, Martina survive brushes with disaster

Bjorn Borg grimaces as he returns shot

TORONTO (CP) — The wind that blew around the National Tennis Centre at York University on Tuesday was nothing more than the collective sigh of relief from organizers of the Canadian Open tennis championships.

The $325,000 championship came within an ace of losing both its No. 1 seeds in the men's and women's draw — Bjorn Borg of Sweden and Martina Navratilova of the United States.

Early Tuesday there was concern that Borg would have to withdraw from the tournament because of a knee injury. Borg, who has not played since winning his fifth consecutive Wimbledon singles crown two months ago, got the go-ahead from his doctor after an early morning practice.

He then went out and disposed of Steve Rogul of Toronto 6-3, 6-2 in 55 minutes of his first-round match.

Navratilova was not hampered by injury. Rather, it was the play of Sherry Acker of the U.S. that almost put the No. 1 seed on the sidelines. Navratilova was blown out in the first set 6-1, won the second easily 6-2, then took the third on a 7-6 tiebreaker which she won 7-3.

Navratilova admitted she felt the pressure.

"I had to tell myself to slow down," she said. "I was rushing myself and I almost panicked.

Coming close was no consolation for Acker.

"It's still losing," she said. "I don't get to play tomorrow. I was thinking about an upset, but I had to keep telling myself to shut up. My nerves were just awful. I think I was partially unconscious out there."

Borg's status will remain a day-to-day affair. Although he claimed he felt no pain in his knee, he said that if inflammation or discomfort returned, he might have to withdraw.

"The U.S. Open in two weeks is my first priority," Borg said.

Vitas Gerulaitis, a close friend and practice partner said the Swede may have weakened the knee while jogging in Romania prior to his marriage three weeks ago.

In other women's singles play, teenage sensation Andrea Jaeger of the U.S., the No. 8 seed, beat Susan Leo of Australia 6-4, 6-3 and Betty Stove of the Netherlands downed Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 7-6, 7-6.

In women's doubles action, Roberta McCallum of the U.S., and Pam Whytcross of Australia beat Wendy Barlow of Victoria and Karen Dewis of London, Ont., 6-2, 6-0.

Three clubs right together as NL West race heats up

By The Canadian Press

The National League is having a grand old time playing "Can You Top This?"

No sooner had Montreal Expos climbed into a tie with the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates in the East Division Tuesday night, then the West finished the day with three teams just one-half game apart.

Montreal regained a share of the lead by blanking St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 with the help of a triple play while the Pirates had their eight-game winning streak ended by New York Mets 3-1.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles Dodgers suffered a stunning 7-6 loss to Atlanta Braves and saw their lead in the West remain at one-half game over Houston Astros, 2-0 losers to San Francisco Giants. Cincinnati Reds edged San Diego Padres 3-2 and trail the Dodgers by one-half game and Houston by one percentage point.

In other action, Philadelphia Phillies beat Chicago Cubs 8-5 in the completion of Monday's suspended game and then won the regularly scheduled contest, as well, 5-2.

Ellis Valentine singled and Gary Carter doubled him home in the fourth inning as the Expos defeated the Cardinals behind the four-hit pitching of Fred Norman, Elias Sosa and Woodie Fryman. Norman, making only his fifth start, allowed all four hits in six innings-plus.

"I've had better stuff," said Norman. "I was fortunate.

"They hit the ball hard, but they hit it at somebody."

One of the Cardinals' hardest shots wound up as a triple play. Keith Hernandez and Ted Simmons singled in the bottom of the fourth but third baseman Larry Parrish snared George Hendrick's smash at his shoetops and threw to second baseman Rodney Scott to nail Hernandez. Scott then relayed to first baseman Warren Cromartie before Simmons could get back.

Ray Burris blanked Pittsburgh for eight innings and Alex Trevino broke up a pitching duel with a two-run single off Rick Rhoden in the seventh.

Pinch hitter Jeff Burroughs slugged a game-winning three-run homer with one out in the top of the ninth off Rick Sutcliffe following a walk to Biff Pocoroba and Brian Asselstine's single. Dale Murphy hit his 19th homer with the bases empty in the second inning and Bob Horner slammed his 23rd, a three-run shot in the third. The Dodgers had taken a 6-1 lead with four unearned runs in the seventh.

In the American League, Mark The Bird Fidrych drew a crowd of 48,361 to Tiger Stadium on his return from the minors. But the Boston red Sox came too and when Jim Dwyer hit a home run in the eighth inning it ended any hopes of a triumphant return and instead gave Boston a 5-4 victory.

Klacza collects ninth for Blues

Ken Klacza improved his Northwest Baseball League-leading victory total to nine and pitched his third straight complete game Tuesday night as Victoria Blues defeated Medford A's 9-4 before a gathering of 225 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

Klacza, who was a childhood friend of Medford's losing pitcher, Mike Altobelli, when their families lived in the same neighborhood of Chicago, struck out three batters and walked three while pitching a six-hitter.

Now 9-3, Klacza has 64 strikeouts in 77 innings.

Medford errors helped the Blues considerably and the Victoria team also got a fine display of power from their batters.

Paul Kirsch hit his third homer of the season in the fourth inning, Gary Humpston cracked one over the right-field fence in the seventh and Barry Moss, who drove in three runs altogether, smacked a two-run homer in the eighth.

For Medford, Joe Soprano and Bill Krueger both hit homers.

After five innings, Blues trailed 3-2 but they came back well, scoring three runs in the sixth and two runs each in the seventh and eighth.

Soccer stars traded

LONDON (Reuter) — London soccer clubs Arsenal and Crystal Palace were involved today in the exchange of three players valued at a total of about $5.5 million.

Arsenal traded 19-year-old striker Clive Allen for Palace's Ken Sansom, 20, an England international left back. In addition, Arsenal reserve goalkeeper Paul Barron signed for Palace at a fee of $920,000.

Allen, signed by Arsenal for $2.3 million in the off-season, has been transferred without playing a league game. The deal puts a similar price tag on Sansom, one of England's few successes at the European championships in June.

Salmonbellies keep alive; Alexander wins star award

KEVIN ALEXANDER
. . . dominates scoring

New Westminster Salmonbellies have bounced back into the picture in their Western Lacrosse Association semi-final series against league-champion Coquitlam Adanacs.

And with the next game in the best-of-seven series set for New Westminster Thursday night, it would be no surprise if the series goes the limit.

Salmonbellies Tuesday night scored a 13-12 overtime victory over the Adanacs at Coquitlam for their second straight triumph after dropping the first three games.

The other series between Victoria Shamrocks and Vancouver Burrards resumes at Memorial Arena tonight. It is tied 2-2. Game time is 8 p.m.

Brian Tasker's second goal of the night at 8:12 of overtime gave Salmonbellies their win.

Coquitlam led 5-2 after one period but the Salmonbellies went ahead 9-6 after two and the teams were tied at 11 after regulation play.

Bob Tasker led New Westminster with three goals, Bill Mosdell and Ivan Tuura each had a pair and Gilles Bezeau, Ken Brown, Eric Cowieson and Dave Durante wrapped up the 'Bellies' output.

Ray Mattinson was Adanacs' top shooter with three goals. Rico Bellusci and Mike Reelie had two each and Moe Jodoin, Mat Aitken, Dave Cochrane, Wayne McAuley and Randy Bryan the others.

Meanwhile, it has been confirmed that Kevin Alexander of the Shamrocks has won the CP Air-Labatts three-star contest and that means a trip anywhere in CP Air's world plus $1,000 spending money.

Alexander beat out two of his teammates, Larry Smeltzer and Jim Lynch, for the award.

The CP Air-Labatts award is based on three points for being named first star of a game by the media, two points for second star and one point for third star.

Alexander had 38 points, Smeltzer 32 and Lynch 31.

Alexander led the WLA in scoring with 80 goals and 62 assists for 142 points. Lynch was second with 54 goals and 59 assists for 113 points. Smeltzer and Mike Duch had the best goals-against average of 10.49 with Smeltzer appearing in 23 of the 24 games. Duch, who has been injured for much of the year, appeared in four games.

Alexander dominated the statistical department. He set a record for the most power-play goals, 28; established a record for six-goal games with his seventh and eighth, had 14 three-goal performances and scored at least one goal in every game.

Lynch and Eric Cowieson of New Westminster scored at least one point in every game.

Alexander and Bill Marechek of the Rocks shared first-goal-of-the-game honors with four while Mark Valastin of Coquitlam and Charn Dhillon of Nanaimo had the most game-winning goals, three.

Smeltzer set a record for goalkeepeers with six assists in one game.

Roger Dubyna of Nanaimo served the most penalty minutes, 120, with Gerry Cadwallader of the Shamrocks second at 100.

Parent, Cranston chalk up victories

Medalist Erv Parent of Seattle, defending-champion Ray Cranston of the host Victoria Golf Club and last year's finalist Keith Welts of Seattle all made it through to the quarter-finals Tuesday as the 58th annual Seniors' North West Golf Association championship continued at the Oak Bay course.

Parent, who had led the 16 qualifiers Monday with a one-under-par 70, defeated Max Hunter of Tacoma 7 and 5 in the first round of match play.

Cranston, who was second among qualifiers with a 73 Monday, beat Ole Jensen of Seattle 4 and 3, while Welts downed Bill McColl of Victoria 2 and 1.

In Tuesday's other matches, Gord Millin of Colwood defeated Malcolm MacKay of Victoria 3 and 2, Lou Williams of Victoria downed Walter Daggatt of Seattle 5 and 4, Gordon Verley of Victoria edged Kelly Walker of Seattle 2 and 1, Bill Thompson of Victoria beat Ken Newbury of Vancouver 4 and 3, and Arnold Groth of Seattle got past Jack Richardson of Vancouver 6 and 5.

Today, Parent was playing Millin, Welts was up against Williams, it was Cranston against Verley and Thompson versus Groth.

Winners of those matches go into the championship semi-finals starting at 8:30 a.m. Thursday and the final is set for Friday morning.

Decision later in Hudon appeal

Decision has been reserved by the B.C. Racing Commission on an appeal by standardbred owner-trainer-driver Joe Hudon over a fine and suspension handed out earlier this season.

Hudon, the leading driver at the current Sandown meeting, had his appeal heard Monday.

Hudon was fined $250 and suspended 15 days by Sandown stewards when one of the horses he trains, B.C. Cinder, tested positive following the running of the 10th race July 10.

Hudon claimed he was innocent of any wrongdoing and immediately appealed. It is understood he took a lie-detector test to prove his innocence.

He is entitled to train and drive until the Commission reaches a decision.

Meanwhile, trainer George Brown, who was the leading trainer at Cloverdale this past season, has drawn a $250 fine and a 15-day suspension from Sandown stewards for a similar offence.

Jump Off Joe, a four-year old chestnut gelding, trained by Brown, tested positive following the running of the fifth race on Aug. 1.

Jump Off Joe finished second to Who Don in that race.

The usual procedure is for the winner and one other runner to be tested for drugs after each race.

The urinalysis samples are then sent to federal government laboratories for testing.

Tuesday's card was highlighted by three-figure exactor payoffs in the second and third races and a $640.10 return in the ninth-race triactor when Pop McKlyo was followed across the line by Mr. Joe Kool and Senga Bogey.

Worthy D.A. and Pegassus Becky teamed for a $147 return in the second race and Roaming Pence and Hazel B Bow combined for a $139.30 payoff in the third.

Earlier, track officials announced that Daily Double wagering will start on Friday for the remainder of the meeting. The Daily Double will be held on the first two races each day, eliminating the first-race exactor.

Touch football meeting set

Plans for a 16-team senior men's tournament, scheduled to start Aug. 22, are expected to be finalized Thursday at a meeting of the Greater Victoria Touch Football League.

Thursday's session, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Cedar Hill Recreation Center, will also include discussion of plans for the league season that starts next month. All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting.

Taaffe power lifts Ingraham

Mike Taaffe came up with some big hitting at Central Park Tuesday night as Ingraham Rodeway Inn remained the only unbeaten team in the District Senior "B" men's softball playoffs.

Taaffe hit a home run, a triple and a single, scored twice and drove in a run as Ingraham defeated Tod Hackett Construction 4-2.

Victory gave the Innkeepers a 2-0 win-loss record in the three-team, double-round-robin playoff. Tod Hackett is 1-1 and Tally Ho is 0-2. Tally Ho and Ingraham play Thursday.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Knowles Realty nipped Juan de Fuca Builders 5-4 to eliminate them from the six-team, double-knockout District Senior "C" playoffs.

Pitcher Larry McKinnon hit a home run for Knowles while clubmate Dale Ewasiuk homered, doubled and drove in three runs.

Labatts and Royal Oak meet in the winners' bracket final at Central Park tonight while Mears and Knowles play at Heywood Park.

In the Macdonald Park Men's League playoffs, Earl Ross hit a three-run homer to help Coast Projects edge Mayfair Insurance 5-4 and take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five final.

And in the Victoria-Saanich Women's League consolations at Hyacinth Park, Bev Karpiuk and Christy Smith hit two-run triples and Karpiuk earned the victory as Strathcona Stingers shaded Victoria Athletics 6-5 in the first game of the best-of-three final.

Lions trade veteran

ROCHESTER, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions have traded veteran linebacker Ed O'Neil to New England Patriots for a future National Football League draft choice.

Cricket test ends in draw

LEEDS, England (AP) — The rain-curtailed final cricket test match ended inevitably in a draw Tuesday and the West Indies beat England in the series 1-0 with four matches drawn.

England batted slowly on the last day to reach 227 for six, ahead by 125 runs.

After a blank day Monday, the weather permitted a full day's play except for a brief stoppage for bad light in the afternoon. There was never any real prospect of a result, but England survived a worrying spell after losing two wickets for three runs.

At that point England were 129 for three, just 27 runs ahead with a possible 3½ hours play left.

Brian Rose, the Somerset batsman, limped to the wicket with a knee injury and batted with a runner. He held on for 43 not out, and helped to steer England clear of danger.

Motorcycle star dies of injuries received in crash

NORTHAMPTON, England (AP) — French motorcyclist Patrick Pons died Tuesday night, two days after crashing at the British Grand Prix at Silverstone. A spokesman for Northampton General Hospital said Pons, 27, never regained consciousness after being admitted to the hospital's intensive care unit with severe head injuries and being placed on a life support machine.

Region approves monthly bus passes

Fully transferable — from one person to another — monthly bus passes will be introduced in the Capital Regional District, the CRD's transit planning and management committee decided Tuesday.

Chief transit planner Bill O'Brien told the committee the passes will cost about $20.

On his recommendation the committee will hear proposals from the Toronto-based security firm of Wackenhut of Canada Ltd. on how to implement and operate the pass system.

Committee chairman Norma Sealey suggested the passes initially be marketed through the CRD and municipal offices.

If Wackenhut handled the monthly pass project, O'Brien said it would expect 2½ to 5 per cent of the revenue.

The committee requested a staff report on the costs of the project being handled by the region.

The committee also called for a report on personalized transit passes for special groups.

The committee rejected O'Brien's suggestion that male students at the University of Victoria and Camosun College have a red letter M stamped on their monthly passes.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said it was as ludicrous as stamping B for blue eyes or Z for zombies.

It was agreed that education passes only be sold to full-time registered students in spite of Sealey's assertion that many part-time students need financial assistance and often put in more hours at the college and university than full-time students.

The committee will study it more.

Improved Western Community service assured

New measures to improve public transit in the Western Community were approved Tuesday by the Capital Regional District's transit planning and management committee.

They included:

— The 54-55 Metchosin-Happy Valley proposed route be rerouted along the Happy Valley Road between Metchosin Road and Rocky Point Road intersections until road upgrading on Taylor Road is carried out by the highways department.

— Plans be developed for improved service from the Western Community and Esquimalt dockyard area.

— The schedule reliability of routes be closely monitored after implementation.

— CRD staff continue to negotiate minor road improvements.

Directors spent more than an hour discussing a proposal by chief transit planner Bill O'Brien that a Colwood transit centre, costing $150,000, be built at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

It would be built south of the main arena and an additional $20,000 would be needed to provide 50 parking spaces.

Larry Miller, assistant general manager of the Urban Transit Authority, said, however, such a centre is premature.

The committee decided to ask for regional board approval to take action on O'Brien's recommendation or other alternative solutions after staff produces further studies on costing and other details.

Act clarified on B.C. Place

The provincial government has moved to clarify a major concern about its controversial B.C. Place Act.

The act, which establishes B.C. Place Ltd., the Crown corporation to be set up to administer the multi-faceted development in Vancouver's False Creek area, included a section which appeared to give it widespread power to expropriate land anywhere in the province.

The NDP said the intent of the legislation was to allow B.C. Place Ltd. to expropriate land to swap with Marathon Realty Ltd. for its large chunk of property on False Creek.

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, who said it was never the government's intention to expropriate other than False Creek acreage, Tuesday placed on the order paper an amendment stipulating that the expropriation power can only be used in that area.

"We may need to have expropriation powers, not from Marathon, but maybe from small adjoining properties and we may need to have some expropriation powers dealing with more than one lease on the property," he said.

Rogers said, however, the government has no plans to change another section of the act which gives B.C. Place Ltd. the right to spend money above that approved by the legislature. The money could be approved by a cabinet order.

Couple clubbed to death

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP were questioning a person Tuesday night following a double murder at a North Vancouver townhouse.

The bodies of a man and a woman, both believed to be in their early 20s, were found in a first-floor bedroom by firefighters responding to a call at about 6:30 a.m. PDT Tuesday.

Autopsy results and positive identification of the pair were pending, but an RCMP spokesman said cause of death is thought to be head injuries inflicted with an aluminum baseball bat.

RCMP using tracking dogs found a bloodstained bat in bushes near the townhouse.

Benefits extended in Vic Press layoffs

Victoria Press has told The Newspaper Guild it will extend fringe benefits for laid-off employees for an extra two months beyond Aug. 31, the date 61 staff on the Times and Colonist are to be laid off in an economy move.

A special committee of the Guild, which represents 192 employees — including 29 of those laid off — met Victoria Press vice-president Colin McCullough and controller Peter Dorazio Tuesday.

Dorazio told the union representatives that except for long term disability and pension plan benefits, the company will continue paying for employees' health and welfare package until Oct. 31.

It effectively extends medical and dental plan coverage for those who haven't found other work until the end of October, as coverage continues a month past the date premiums stop.

The Guild presented a proposal for job-sharing to provide extra work for those laid off and who haven't secured employment elsewhere by the end of the month, but the company officials were not enthusiastic.

Union president John Bradford said the Guild had commitments from 13 permanent staff to give up at least four weeks apiece to those laid off, and there was a proposal to split one full-time position into two part-time jobs.

McCullough said that on a wide scale, such job-sharing would interfere with the company's plans for the new merged newspaper, the Times-Colonist and might give false hopes to laid-off employees.

The company also said it is willing to discuss severance benefits for early retirees on an individual basis with employees who may be close to 65, but stopped short of offering the same severance pay given to laid-off workers — which is a minimum of five weeks pay or two weeks for every year worked.

Singing museum piece

GLENWOOD, N.B. (CP) — "A's for the axes, and that you'se all know, B's for the boys that can use them all so, C's for the chopping, which now begins, And D for the danger we all stand in. . ."

The Lumberman's Alphabet is one of Wilmot MacDonald's favorite songs, and when the grand old man of Miramichi folksinging likes a song, you can be sure it is the bona fide stuff. Also, for MacDonald, the alphabet is also something of an autobiography.

"I'm just an old farmer and lumberman that likes to sing songs and tell stories," he said in an interview Tuesday. But it is his special style of a capella singing that has attracted international attention.

The Lumberman's Alphabet and Peter Emberley, a tale of a Prince Edward Islander who died in the woods and was buried at nearby Boisetown, N.B., have made 77-year old former lumberjack a walking museum piece.

He was recently filmed singing those two lusty tales by a crew from the Washington-based Smithsonian Institution as part of a series the museum is preparing on Anglo-American folk singing.

"They wanted me to go to Texas but I didn't want to, I don't travel any more. So I said no and they came here, after I gave them the right trail to find me."

The crew flew to Halifax before renting a van for the drive to the Miramichi River area in northeastern New Brunswick, a place MacDonald describes as the closest thing to being in heaven itself.

The crew spent two days with the singer on his farm before leaving, and presenting their subject with a flask of rum as a parting gift.

"I guess I could sing 80 songs without stopping for a week," he said admitting he has written only one himself. The rest, he says, he learned from his years working in the woods.

MacDonald started singing as a child but he said he learned most of his repertoire during the 35 years he spent working in the camps. He sings of times when he was making home brew, of murders and of ghosts but his best are about his lifelong love, the woods.

"You know, there were some camps I didn't want to leave . . imagine that, spending all winter in the woods and when you get a chance to leave, you don't want to."

MacDonald is a founding father of the annual Miramichi Folk Festival and he wants to see the festival, now in its 23rd year, to continue. But he is worried the "younger folk" are not taking interest in traditional music.

"It (the folk festival) will continue if we get a few more singers. . . when we started out we had 28, now we have only four. I don't know why the younger folk don't want to learn it."

Folksongs tell a story, he said, adding that's why they will go on through the corridors of time.

Nothing seems to dim fans' worship of Elvis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Neither books detailing his sometimes bizarre behavior, nor testimony by his physician regarding an acute drug dependancy have tarnished fans' image of Elvis Presley.

Three years after his death, Presley is still the biggest draw his hometown has to offer. And this year, the city is offering more Elvis-mania than ever as it awaits an onslaught of 10,000 visitors.

Two separate Presley festivals spread over several days, the unveiling of a half-ton bronze statue, the dedication of a memorial park and visits to Presley's gravesite are only part of the doings leading up to Saturday, the third anniversary of Presley's death.

Graceland, Presley's estate, is to be opened from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday to allow fans to visit the gravesites of Elvis, his parents and his grandmother.

Memphis State University has lined up 24 leading blues authorities for two days of seminars, concerts and Elvis films. The Salute to Memphis Music: The Blues will end Saturday night with a banquet in honor of entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis, a Presley contemporary.

Rivalling Memphis State's bash will be a four-day commercial undertaking of music, exhibits, movies, souvenirs and remembrances called Memphis Music Festival '80: A Tribute to Elvis. It starts Tuesday at Cook Convention Center.

Before the judge

Driving infractions are insufficient in themselves to constitute impaired driving, Judge Gilbert Hogg ruled Tuesday in provincial court.

He acquitted Keith Rollier, 45, of 1950 Maple in Sooke.

Nor was Rollier's stumbling gait, slow pupil reaction or belligerent attitude on Nov. 16 sufficient to convict him, Hogg said.

The judge noted Rollier's irregular walking was explained by a medical condition while the belligerence was consistent with someone who felt wrongly arrested.

But he convicted Rollier of refusing to supply a breath sample.

Hogg said the evidence indicated Rollier had no intention of complying with Constable Peter Backus' request for a sample.

The judge said he was bothered by a third charge of obstructing a police officer. He said that although Rollier had kicked Backus there was no evidence on the severity of the kick which resulted in Rollier being punched four times in the nose.

Punching Rollier while seated was not the way policemen conducted themselves when he practised law, the judge said.

Hogg said that regrettably he had to convict Rollier of obstruction while recognizing he had been treated badly by the officer.

"You were treated badly after you started the trouble," said Hogg before fining Rollier $250 on the obstruction charge, and $200 for refusing to provide a breath sample.

A 19-year-old Saanich man was sentenced to 45 days in jail after Judge Blake Allen found him guilty of assaulting a policeman and resisting arrest.

Alex Cubangbang Matrap, 3258 Glasgow, had pleaded guilty earlier to a breach of probation.

The charges stemmed from an Aug. 6 incident at neighboring Wurtele Place homes where Matrap attempted to contact former girl-friend Janice Cook, 16. He had been forbidden to do so under an April 21 probation order in connection with three convictions of breach of recognizance.

The girl testified she saw Matrap approaching the house on Aug. 6. She locked the front door while a friend phoned police who arrived after the accused had left.

A short time later the girl and a companion went to 1021 Wurtele where Matrap later arrived and asked to see her. He was told to leave. Police were called and a scuffle took place during the arrest. A constable was bitten.

Matrap testified he was not aware the officer, dressed in civilian clothes, was anything more than "a normal person" although the court heard evidence the officer had identified himself.

Matrap was placed on 12 months probation and forbidden to contact the girl or her family.

A 26-year-old Edmonton woman was jailed seven days after her lawyer told Judge Harold Alder fines would be too harsh.

Gail Turner pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing a breath sample breath following a Tuesday collision at Blanshard and Fisgard.

Fined on drinking-driving charges: Alexander Trussler, 39, of 135 Helmcken, $400; Charles Mudrak, 45, of 2932 Deborah, $400; Glen Teskey, 31, of 105-1993 Kaltasin, $400.

Oil firm profits up 54% in '79

OTTAWA (CP) — The foreign-dominated petroleum industry racked up record after-tax profits last year of $4.7 billion — up by 54 per cent from 1978 — yet reinvestment in oil and gas exploration declined by 13 per cent, the energy department reported Tuesday.

Results of an industry-wide monitoring survey show a whopping increase in internal cash flow funds from the sale of petroleum products and from oil-price increases — despite an oil price increase last year of only $1 per barrel, half the normal amount.

The price of domestic oil at the wellhead has already risen by $3 a barrel in 1980, paving the way for further windfall profits this year.

The survey also shows that by the end of 1979, non-residents owned 72 per cent and controlled 82 per cent of Canadian petroleum industry revenues, down from 80 per cent and 92 per cent respectively at the endof 1971.

Funds gathered by the industry from other sources, such as long-term loans and new share capital, grew even faster than internal cash flow, giving the industry nearly $12 billion to work with last year.

Release of the survey comes in the midst of a national campaign by the industry designed to convince governments and the public that it needs even more revenue to finance continued exploration and development in the 1980s.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde, noting the decline in ownership and control, welcomed the gradual trend toward more Canadian participation But he also described the present level of foreign ownership as "excessive."

The Liberal government is committed to increasing Canadian ownership of the petroleum industry to 50 per cent by the end of the decade.

Lalonde said the current situation "will be taken prominently into account in the formulation of our new national energy program, which I will be announcing shortly."

It is widely expected the government will cut into industry revenues through higher taxes when the planned fall budget is announced.

In Calgary, Ian Smythe, executive-director of the Canadian Petroleum Association, took issue with the report's contention that reinvestment has dropped.

Smythe said that although so-called downstream investment in areas such as refineries and marketing has tailed off, expenditures upstream in new exploration and development are almost identical to that of 1978, at about 96 per cent of cash flow.

"We think that's where the money should be spent and we think it's important to note investment is continuing at record rates," Smythe said.

Smythe summarized the report as "an extremely complex one which makes comparisons difficult,"

Harvie Andre, Conservative party economic critic, said in an interview from Calgary that the government should be concerned about whether sufficient revenue is being invested to ensure oil self-sufficiency for Canada.

It was up to Ottawa to adjust tax rates if the industry's profit margins appeared to be excessive, he said, while refusing to criticize the oil companies for taking advantage of their situation.

"It may be nice politics to shout at the industry but I don't think it serves the national purpose," Andre said.

Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democratic Party, said no more money should flow to the multinationals from increased oil prices.

Petro-Canada, the government oil company, should be expanded to develop the country's resources and the task should not be left to the multinational giants, Broadbent said.

The petroleum association, representing the major multinationals, argues the industry needs some $200 billion if the country is to achieve oil self-sufficiency by the 1990s. The association says the present rate of oil-price increases is not enough to generate that amount.

Diversification by the industry into other energy sources slowed in 1979, with capital expenditures in coal and uranium falling to half of the previous year's level or about $66 million.

30 fired in news radio cutback

TORONTO (CP) — The CKO all-news radio network is firing at least 30 of its 120 employees this week and turning radio stations in five Canadian cities, including Vancouver, into relay stations for programs from Toronto, company president Ben Torchinsky said Tuesday.

Torchinsky's salvaging operation begins next week when CKO radio stations in Montreal, Ottawa, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver become relay stations — employing one or two persons — transmitting national news from Toronto and reporting some regional news. A CKO station in London, Ont., was already only a relay system for Toronto programming.

The network plans to establish within the next few weeks bureaus in Saint John, N.B., Halifax, St. John's, Nfld., Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, northern British Columbia, the Northwest Territories and Northern Ontario.

Each of these bureaus will be staffed by either a full- or part-time reporter with a small office who will phone his stories to Toronto, Torchinsky said. Some of these bureaus will be staffed by people already working for CKO.

Torchinsky said the axe had to fall because the network has lost $10 million since it started three years ago, trying to do too much too fast.

But rather than give up on the all-news concept, network executives decided six months ago to try a rescue operation, saving money by eliminating staff and reducing stations outside Toronto to mere relay points.

CKO will be slowly rebuilt as a Canada-wide news operation after improving the quality during the next year at the Toronto station, where 40 people are employed.

Arctic sea no longer ours?

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Canada owns a much smaller chunk of the Arctic Ocean than government maps show and is ill-prepared to fight almost certain challenges to its sovereignty over the Northwest Passage, says an international law expert.

Since the early part of this century, Canadian maps have shown national boundaries running arrow-straight from the eastern and western limits of Canada's territories to the North Pole. But those boundaries and the so-called sector principle on which they are based are worthless, Donat Pharand, a professor of international law at the University of Ottawa, said Tuesday.

Of even greater concern, Pharand told a Royal Society of Canada symposium marking the centenary of the transfer of the Arctic Islands to Canada from Britain, is the current weakness of Canada's claim to the Northwest Passage as internal waters.

"It is difficult to support historic title to the Northwest Passage when there is little evidence of historical usage," said Pharand.

But use of the passage by mammoth oil and liquified natural gas tankers is imminent. Dome Petroleum and the Arctic Pilot Project both plan tanker traffic in the Northwest Passage, perhaps as early as 1985.

"We can expect a challenge," said Pharand.

Unless Canada establishes a strong case for sovereignty in the Northwest Passage, sailings by foreign flagships will turn it into an international strait, the professor said.

"All ships (including naval vessels and submarines) will have the same rights they have on the high seas. We need to establish and maintain a claim."

To demonstrate the Northwest Passage is an internal waterway, Canada needs to have ships and navigational support systems in place to establish a presence.

Following the 1969 transit of the passage by the U.S. tanker Manhattan, Canada extended its territorial waters to 12 miles from three. That effectively provided a "territorial gate" at the narrowest section of the passage, which is less than 24 miles wide.

But even a territorial gate doesn't allow Canada to prohibit "innocent passage" under the most recent provisions of the International Law of the Sea conference, Pharand said.

Innocent passage means any ship complying with Canada's 1970 Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act can sail through the Northwest Passage at any time.

Canada has since extended its area of economic and fishing interest in coastal waters to 200 miles, but cannot limit innocent passage within that zone.

Pharand says Canada will eventually have to defend its claim to the Northwest Passage before an international court or arbiter.

Hatfield a liar, Grit chief says

FREDERICTON (CP) — Liberal Opposition Leader Joseph Daigle said Tuesday that Premier Richard Hatfield lied in disavowing knowledge of a scheme to raise Progressive Conservative party funds through alleged kickbacks and demanded that he resign and an election be called.

Daigle said the government's integrity had been compromised and that he would use unspecified legal or constitutional options if Hatfield does not resign within a reasonable period — perhaps a week.

Hatfield was out of the province Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

Daigle also called for the resignations of Horace Smith, municipal affairs minister, and Transportation Minister Wilfred Bishop.

The two ministers, along with Hatfield, are the only politicians still in office who were linked to a fund-raising meeting mentioned in the case of Francis Atkinson, found guilty last month of corruptly paying a government employee.

Atkinson, a former Conservative party fund raiser, was given an absolute discharge by Mr. Justice J. Paul Barry of the Court of Queen's Bench. The discharge was granted after the justice department refused to give Atkinson immunity from further prosecution in return for co-operation in the investigation of other party workers.

Daigle said if Hatfield didn't know what was happening in the early 1970s, when Atkinson's offence occurred, he must have known by 1977, when police seized documents used as evidence against Atkinson.

Mirabel's record a Guinness error?

MONTREAL (CP) — Transport Canada wants the publishers of the Guinness Book of World Records to stop listing Mirabel airport as being farther from the city which it serves than any other airport in the world.

Rubin Ginzberg, the airport's general manager, has sent a letter to Guinness editor Peter Mathews pointing out that of the 150 major airports in the world, three beat Mirabel for airport-city distance.

Ginzberg cites the ABC World Airways Guide, which puts Mirabel at 53 kilometres from Montreal. That's closer than London-Stanstead, which is 54 kilometres from London, Tokyo-Narita, 65 kilometres from Tokyo, and Sao Paulo-Viracopos, which is 96.5 kilometres away from downtown.

Fish industry going metric

OTTAWA (CP) — The fishing industry has started a gradual conversion to the metric system, with plans to complete the changeover by January, 1982.

Barclay Craig of the metric commission said today that processors and fishermen will be affected by changes in weights, temperatures and capacity, but there will be no conversion of nautical miles, used to measure sea distances and wind speeds.

'Last of the negotiators' resigns NIB presidency

By STEVE MERTL

CALGARY (CP) — Noel Starblanket, who calls himself "the last of the negotiators" of the Canadian Indian movement, is stepping down this week after four years as president of the National Indian Brotherhood.

He said Tuesday that if Ottawa and the provinces don't move soon on such crucial issues as treaty rights, land claims and Indian participation in framing a new constitution, native militance will grow.

"I've told the prime minister and Indian affairs minister: 'look, we cannot forever hold our young braves in check. We are the last of the negotiators'."

Starblanket, 33, and his vice-president, Dennis Nicholas of the Tobique reserve near Perth-Andover, N. B., are backing Bob Manuel, a band chief from Neskainlith, near Kamloops, B.C., and Arnold Goodleaf of Caughnawaga, Que., as their successors.

Manuel, also 33, was in a three-way fight for the presidency with Del Riley, 36, of Chippewa band near London, Ont., president of the Union of Ontario Indians, and Clive Linklater, 44, of Ottawa, an organizer with the brotherhood.

Linklater, an Indian movement worker originally from the Couchiching reserve in western Ontario, withdrew from the race for president of the National Indian Brotherhood on Tuesday.

His voice almost breaking, he told 68 delegates to the 11th annual brotherhood conference that it would be divisive for him to contest the job being vacated by Noel Starblanket of Saskatchewan.

Linklater said he would support either of the other two candidates — Bob Manuel, chief of the Neskainlith band near Kamloops, and Del Riley, president of the Union of Ontario Indians.

Starblanket supports Manuel because he doesn't expect him to compromise on Indian demands.

"No Indian leader has the mandate to compromise any of our political principles or aboriginal rights."

Entrenchment of Indian rights in a new constitution is the No. 1 issue at the annual conference here.

"We're no further ahead today in recognizing Indian treaty rights or aboriginal rights than our forefathers were," said Starblanket.

Only the Quebec Liberal party, led by Claude Ryan, has pledged to support full participation by Indians in constitutional talks, he said.

So far Indian representatives will be able to take part in negotiations only on issues directly affecting them but the brotherhood is pushing for equal status with Ottawa and the provinces at the bargaining table.

Starblanket's two-term stay as president of the umbrella group for Canada's 300,000 Treaty Indians cost him his marriage. But the native of the Starblanket reserve, about 120 kilometres north of Regina, plans to return home to build a house, and he plans to marry Alayne Bigwin of the Alderville reserve, near Peterborough, Ont., a year from now.

"I just ran out of energy towards the end of the presidency," said Starblanket.

He and Nicholas have been hired by the brotherhood on four-month consulting contracts and he plans to work on projects for his own band. Starblanket said he's also been approached to run for the presidency of the Saskatchewan Indian Federation but won't take up that offer for awhile.

Nicholas, 35, first elected chief of his band at age 21, said, "I'd like to take a breather, maybe go to university," but added, "I'm quite sure I'll be back."

The final session of the conference Thursday features a morning address by John Munro, federal Indian and northern affairs minister.

Starblanket: native militancy on the rise

Trucker pulls rig from fire scene

OTTAWA (CP) — A badly-burned truck driver from nearby Stittsville drove his truck loaded with flammable welding equipment away from a burning diesel fuel tank in suburban Ottawa after the tank exploded as he was reparing it.

Witnesses said Kerry Argue, 27, climbed back into his truck after the Monday explosion, drove it about 20 metres from the fire and collapsed.

Argue, a father of two, is in hospital with second-degree burns to his back, neck and arms.

Nepean fire inspector Glenn Fleck said Argue's actions prevented a more serious accident. His truck was carrying acetylene and oxygen tanks inside and gasoline tanks outside.

Argue was patching the 757-litre diesel fuel tank when it blew up, burning the shirt from his back.

Dennis Clement, a friend, said he was looking for Argue after the explosion when "I saw him run back to the truck."

U.S. tourists target of acid rain campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — The environment department will launch an $85,000 advertising campaign this week urging United States tourists to demand that their politicians stop coal pollution that is indirectly killing Canadian lakes.

The campaign, which will be unveiled Thursday at the Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa, asks Americans visiting national parks to write their politicians about acid rain, which has already killed hundreds of lakes in Eastern Canada and threatens thousands more.

Acid rain results primarily from burning of coal without proper pollution controls. Some studies estimate 60 per cent of the acid rain in Eastern Canada is caused by American coal-burning plants.

About 350,000 brochures, 500,000 bumper stickers and thousands of buttons will be distributed to Canadian and American tourists visiting national parks this month, says department spokesman Pierre Dumais.

"If you enjoy Canada's forests, lakes and parks, if you care, help us protect them from acid rain," says one of the brochures.

"In Eastern Canada, hundreds of lakes are already dead. By the turn of the century, tens of thousands of Canada's lakes will have suffered the same fate unless we stop acid rain," says another.

About 20 per cent of visitors to the parks are American, says Dumais. Canadians will also be urged to write American politicians.

Patricia Robert tossed out 6,000 turkey sandwiches for the sake of democracy. She was all set to serve box lunches to 6,000 delegates to the Democratic convention when she discovered some of the sandwiches "didn't taste that good." There was no hesitation. "Imagine 6,000 people getting ill!"

Howard Selinger, of Montreal has a 1977 sports car fully-equipped with all the extras: poison on the floor, cheese-baited mousetraps on the back seat and a resident mouse. The mouse appeared when Selinger and his girlfriend Mindy Lesser were out on a picnic. "Mindy opened the car door to get the food and there it was," Selinger said. Then, he added, when he took the car into a service station for a wash, "I heard this little squeak and it popped out of the vent and started racing back and forth across the dashboard." The mouse nipped back into the air vent and has not been seen since.

Morganna

The public relations coup Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher thought she would score by dropping in for tea at a constituent's house was ruined by 100 chanting women and children demonstrators. The crowd, angry about the closing of several playgrounds, buttonholed Thatcher outside the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson. The Pattersons recently bought the 12,000th home sold by the Greater London Council and Thatcher thought it would be a good idea to drop in for tea and present the couple with the deed to the house. "You've done nothing but damage since you came in," one 75-year-old grandmother yelled. "You have squandered our money. You're the worst prime minister we've ever had." Thatcher, apparently unperturbed by the incident, made her way inside for her cup of tea and spent 10 minutes talking about the way the Pattersons decorated their kitchen.

Otto Velez of Toronto Blue Jays is the latest victim of Morganna, the kissing bandit. The buxom stripper dashed on to the playing field in Toronto and bussed Otto as he was getting ready to bat against the Royals in the sixth inning and was led away by police. Velez took a lot of kidding in the clubhouse after the game. Jays' first baseman John Mayberry said: "You didn't look like you were trying to get away very hard." Manager Bobby Mattick didn't think it was funny. Seems Otto was so flustered by the kiss that he grounded out with a baserunner in scoring position. Jays lost 8-5.

Dear Abby:

Shortly after I married Mark I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abby, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal!

Finally, I decided I had had enough of his denials, so two weeks ago I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it. One night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly re-run did he agree to see an ear, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my darling snores no more! Pass this on.

Peace At Last

Dear Peace:

Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out.

Dear Abby:

I've been married for a year to a man I'll call Nick. It's my first marriage and his second. Nick has two children, 12 and eight. He's 36 and I'm 30. I think I should mention that I had nothing to do with Nick's divorce.

My problem: Nick's mother. She is still very close to his first wife, which I do not resent, but she has never accepted me and refuses to give me a chance. She has never been verbally rude to me. She just ignores me.

When Nick brought me to her home and told her we planned to marry, she glared at me, then turned to Nick and said, "I thought you said you'd never get married again!" (No congratulations, best wishes or anything else.)

I may be picky, but one thing upsets me terribly. She used to have pictures of her children and grandchildren displayed on the piano in her living room. Among them was a large wedding picture of Nick and his first wife. Recently she re-arranged her living room and moved all the pictures into her bedroom — leaving the one of Nick and his "ex" on the piano. Now every time I go there I have to sit and look at the picture the entire time, which makes me very uncomfortable.

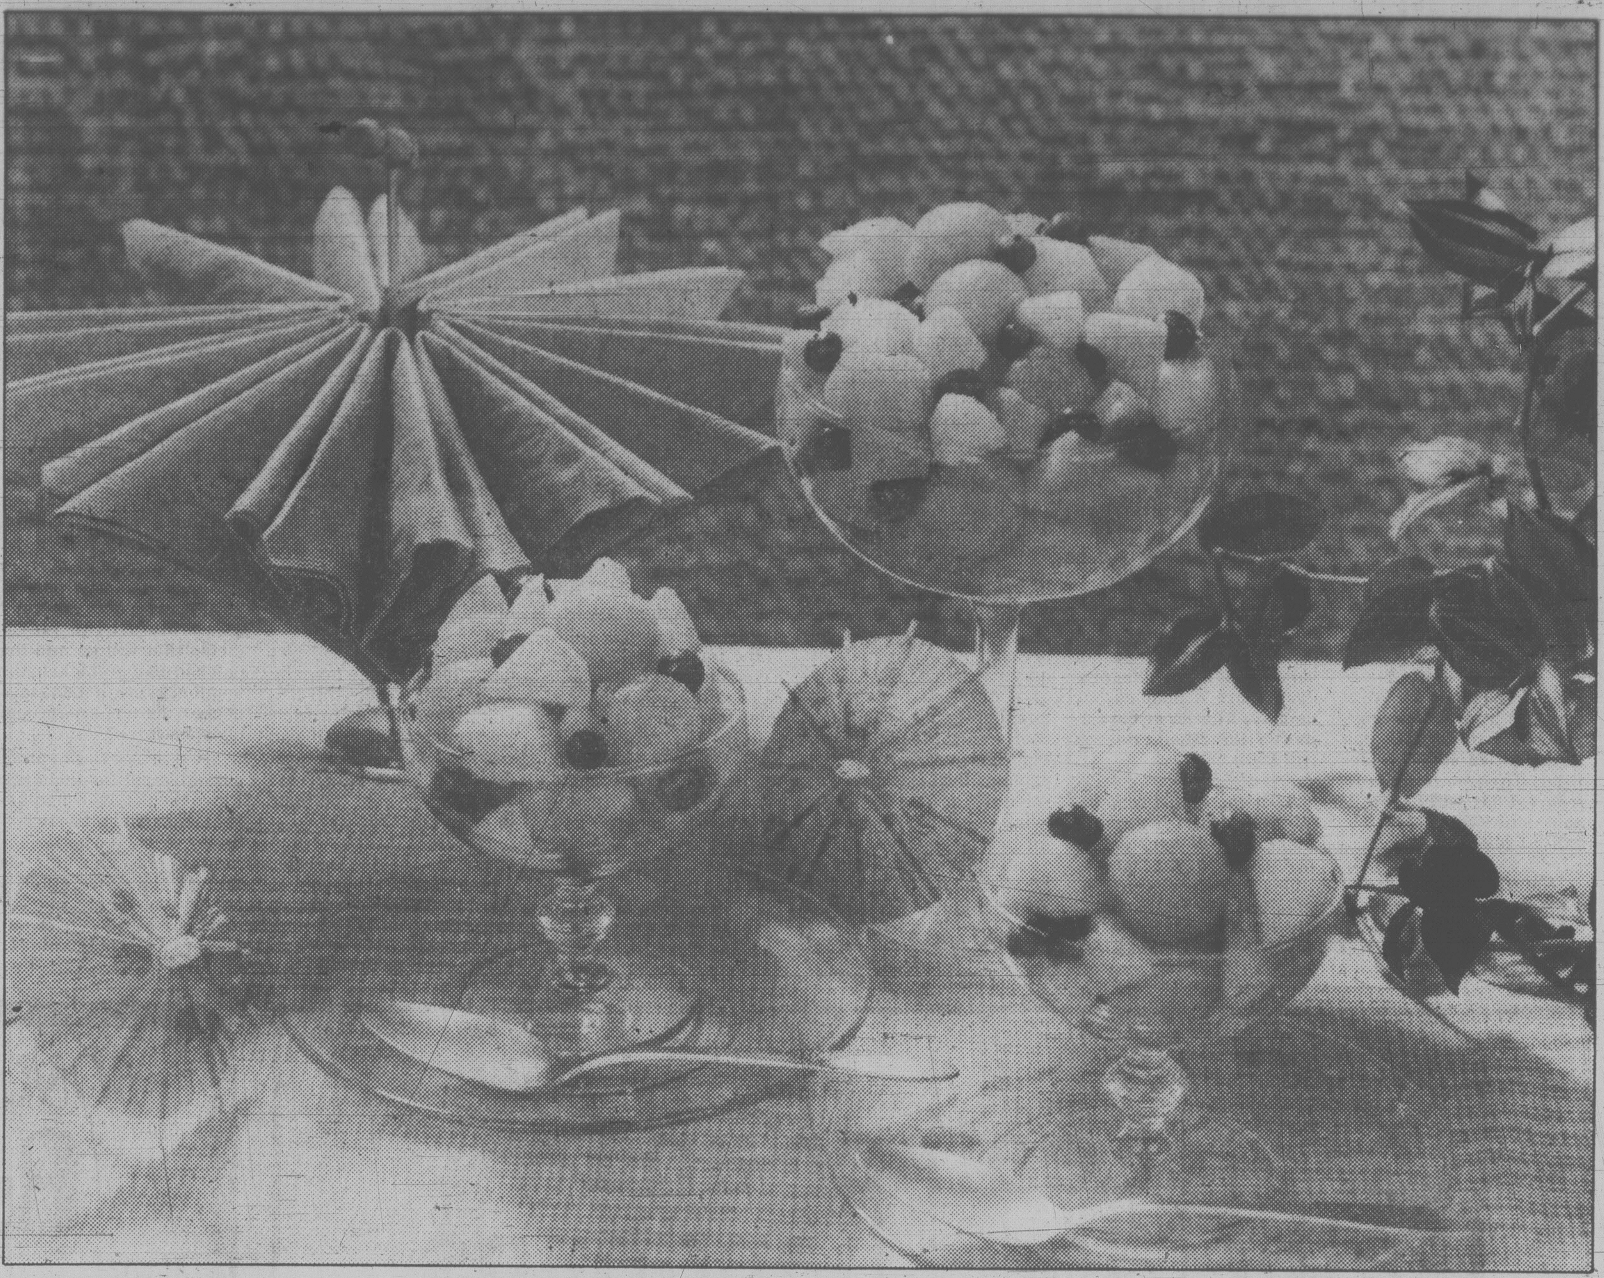
Please don't suggest that I give her a picture of Nick and me. I did, but she never put it out. What should I do?

No. 2

Dear No. 2:

You may be "No. 2" with Nick's mother, but as long as you're No. 1 with Nick, don't let it get you down.

Since Nick's mother ignores you when you visit her, keep your visits to a minimum. And when you do, nothing says you have to look at that picture. Ignore it. Or better yet, take a magazine along and bury your nose (and your hostilities) in it!



FRUIT CAN be served alone or in a salad — all it takes is an artistic touch to make it into a delicious treat served anytime. Fruit salads served in chilled dishes are easy to prepare, nutritious and low in calories, especially if little or no sugar is added. Above all, remember that the month of August is the time of year when fruit is at its most abundant, say the people at Agriculture Canada.

Canning takes caution

Some of us make the same resolution every year — to cut down on or stop home canning altogether. Next thing you know, summer's returned accompanied by its array of fruits and vegetables; your resistance weakens and you become one of the many suddenly obsessed with packing and preserving jars of home-canned goods.

Fresh foods will eventually spoil due to bacteria and other organisms in the air, soil and food itself. In the canning process, food is packed in jars and heated for a specified time to destroy the spoilage organisms. As well, the canning jars are designed to seal airtight to eliminate further entry of air and other contaminants. Thus, canned foods, unlike fresh, keep.

Packed jars are heat processed in a large kettle of boiling water or in a pressure canner, depending on the acidity level of the food. High acid foods include fruits as well as tomatoes. If heated to 100 deg. C. (212 deg. F.) in a boiling water bath canner, bacteria residing in fruits and tomatoes are destroyed.

For further assurance, because the acidity level of different tomato strains may vary, either lemon juice or citric acid are added to jars of tomatoes before processing. Use 2 mL (½ tsp.) powdered citric acid or 5 mL (1 tsp.) lemon juice per quart of tomatoes.

The low acid content of meat, fish, poultry and all vegetables except tomatoes make possible the presence of more dangerous organisms such as the bacterium, Clostridium botulinum. This baterium will survive boiling water temperatures and in airless conditions such as a sealed jar, will produce a deadly poison known as botulism. Only temperatures above the boiling point will destroy the Clostridium botulinum spore and so prevent the production of poison. Because a pressure canner is able to reach a temperaure of 120 Deg. C (240 deg. F.) It is essential that it be used when processing low-acid foods. It is also recommended before tasting low-acid home-canned goods (vegetables and animal products) they be boiled 15-20 minutes in an uncovered pot. Peculiar as it sounds, this is advised because botulism poisoning is tasteless, odourless and undetectable. By boiling uncovered for the required time, the toxin, if present, is driven off.

Open-kettle canning is a third method of food preservation whereby hot-cooked food is transferred directly to hot, sterile jars and sealed without further processing. As the method does not involve treating in a boiling-water-bath, care must be taken during preparation to prevent contaminating the jars and procduct. Use the open-kettle method only if preparing jams and jellies or pickles. Their high sugar or acid content protects and preserves these foods in the absence of processing in boiling water. Never use the open-kettle method to prepare canned fruits, vegetables and animal products. For one thing, they do not have the same high sugar content of jams and jellies or high acid content of pickles, so the risk of spoilage is very high.

Because canning is an extensive topic, as a beginner, be sure to follow a reliable guide and remember, for quality and safety when canning, there are no short cuts. For further, more thorough information on canning practices and safety tips, please write for your free Canning Fact Sheet, B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Marketing Branch, 10344 East Whalley Ring Road, SURREY, B.C. V3T 4H4.

An August gathering

In August, Canada's orchards are filled with a variety of fruit just waiting to be picked and brought to our tables. Full of tangy flavor, vitamins, minerals, and cellulose, fruit is the ideal substitute for rich desserts and high calorie snacks.

Fruit may be served alone or in a salad. All it takes is an artistic touch to make it into a delicious treat served any time. As a snack, serve a selection of fresh fruits attractively arranged on a plate. The delicate flavors and colors make refreshing combinations. Tantalize young and old alike with fruit pieces arranged around a bowl of yogurt dip or cottage cheese. If you use fruits such as peaches or apples, that discolor quickly when exposed to air, dip the pieces in lemon juice to prevent browning.

Seasonal Canadian fruits also have their place at the beginning of a meal, as an appetizer. Fruits may be served in dishes or on a bed of lettuce. Fruit may also be used as an ingredient in accompanying salad or in a more substantial salad plate, combined with protein foods such as poultry or cheese.

Finally, we should not forget fruit salad, a traditional dessert which is delightfully refreshing. Fruit salad served in chilled bowls or over a bed of crushed ice is always easy to prepare, nutritious, and low in calories, especially if little or no sugar is added.

Pauline Vallieres-Klosevych, a food consultant with Agriculture Canada, suggests two recipes prepared with seasonal Canadian fruits, both sure to delight your family and guests.

Cataract surgery is advancing rapidly

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

My mother has early cataracts in both eyes. She is past 65 and has several friends who have had the same condition and have had surgery. Naturally, her interest is great, but her confusion is greater. There seems to be no uniformity in this operation. She and I both would like to know which is the best and most modern operation for the removal of cataracts.

G.K.

Dear G.K.:

The advances in cataract surgery have been spectacular during the past two decades. All surgery is now being performed under an operating microscope. This has expanded the surgical possibilities enormously.

A fundamental law of good judgment is essential. There is no single "best" operation for all patients of all ages in all types of cataracts.

Ophthalmologists recognize this. Only after extensive tests are performed is the ideal operation chosen for the ideal patient. Naturally, some surgeons, by virtue of their special training, may be prejudiced to favor one or another method.

The standard, orthodox and conservative operation is still very much in use.

A new and exciting development in cataract surgery is known as "phaco-emulsification." As the name suggests, the cataract is emulsified by ultrasonic vibration and then is gently removed by suction.

Techniques by which a frozen probe can extraet a cataract may make surgery easier and reduce complications.

One of the great advances is the implantation of a plastic lens at the time of the removal of the cataract. This operation, more usually performed in the older group of patients, has great advantages. The improvement of vision occurs immediately after the operation. It also avoids the need for the repeated changing of glasses after cataract surgery.

There are many new modifications of the cataract operation — so many, in fact, that it must be obvious to you that the choice of such surgery cannot possibly be made by the patient or the family. Certainly, the enthusiasm of a friend who has had the operation should not bias you or your mother in the choice of surgery.

Ophthalmologists arrive at a decision about the particular method only after the most careful consideration of all the factors involved. The age of the patient, the blood pressure, the vision of the other eye, the "age" of the cataract, the kind of cataract, the condition of the heart and lungs and the cardio-vascular system, all enter into the final decision of the type of anesthesia and the type of operation.

Chicken breasts sans bones make best of Dana's secret

your partner's cookbook

By MIKE McGRADY

In some families, recipes become heirlooms. They are closely guarded and passed along to each new generation as it comes of age. Before being given the recipe, the heir is often sworn to secrecy, vowing never to reveal the recipe to outsiders.

Dana's chicken happens to be one of those treasured family recipes. When my niece Dana passed it along to me, I was of course pledged to eternal secrecy. I asked if that meant I couldn't print it in this space. Her shattering decision: "Oh, I guess that would be all right."

So be it. Tonight's main dish is easy to make and delicate to the palate, all in all one of the nicest things that can happen to chicken. You will note that our starting point is "boned chicken breasts." As you may or may not know, the boning of a chicken breast, in amateur hands, can be a thoroughly messy affair. The ancient family recipe explains the easiest way to solve this problem. Here's what you do: When ordering the chicken breasts, tell your butcher, "Oh, yes, and please remove the bones."

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, butter, dry white wine (preferably vermouth), flour, baking powder, baking soda.

The Shopping List: Boned chicken breasts (three pounds); one small can beef bouillon; one small heavy cream; one lemon; chives; onions (three medium); one package frozen peas; two carrots; one green pepper; five small turnips; six medium potatoes; one pound string beans; one pound asparagus (fresh, if available); buttermilk; one quart vanilla ice cream; one package frozen strawberries.

The vegetable medley requires two hours of very slow cooking so we'll get that out of the way first. The only test tonight comes in the final moments when a certain scheduling genius is required to get everything to the table at once.

4:15 P.M.: We'll be using a heavy pot with a tight-fitting cover for the mixed vegetables. Begin by melting a stick of butter over medium heat. As the butter is melting, slice the onions into thin slices and allow them to cook in the butter until they're translucent. As the onions are cooking, cut the tips from the string beans, slice them lengthwise and add them to the pot. Peel the carrots, the turnips and the potatoes; cut them into small cubes and add them. Cut the seeds from the green pepper, slice it in thin strips and add. Add the peas. And, finally, the asparagus. Put heat on low and simmer the vegetables in the covered pot. From time to time, shake the pot gently. (Caution! Don't stir the vegetables too frequently or you will find yourself with a pot of baby food.)

5:15 P.M.: Remove strawberries from freezer and allow them to thaw.

5:45 P.M.: Now the biscuits. It is possible to make simple and successful biscuits from a mix. In fact, I'd recommend that if you can find any without preservatives or additives. Put two cups of sifted flour in a mixing bowl. Add a teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of baking soda. Now add five tablespoons of butter and, holding a knife in each hand, cut in the butter until it is evenly mixed. Add three-quarters of a cup of buttermilk and stir this in with a fork.

Scatter some flour on your work surface and knead the dough with your hands for less than a minute. Flatten the dough against the table until it is about a half-inch thick — you can use either your hands or a rollling pin. Now, using a cookie cutter or a juice glass, cut small circles of the dough and put them on a buttered baking sheet.

6 P.M.: Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Since time will be of the essence, carefully assemble all the ingredients that will go into the chicken dish — chicken, the bouillon, wine, lemon, salt, pepper, butter, cream and chopped chives.

Use a heavy flame-proof casserole pot for this dish. Place the pot over medium heat and melt half a stick of butter. When the butter has melted, add the chicken breasts and squeeze half a lemon over them. Add salt and pepper. Now cover the casserole and put it into the hot oven. The chicken breasts should be cooked through in seven or eight minutes; cut into one to be sure.

6:20 P.M.: As you remove the chicken from the oven, raise temperature to 450 degrees. Slide in the tray of biscuits; they should be done in 10 minutes.

Remove chicken breasts from casserole and keep them warm while you make the cream sauce. Put the casserole pot over medium-high heat and add a fourth of a small can of bouillon. Add about the same amount of wine. And boil until the suace becomes thick, scraping up and mixing in any of the juices that cling to the sides of the pot. Add the small container of heavy cream and boil again until the sauce again turns thick. Pour sauce over chicken breasts and top with the chopped chives.

6:30 P.M.: Quick now. The biscuits brown from the oven. The vegetables. The chicken. To be followed by ice cream and strawberries.

And one final word. I'd appreciate it personally if you'd keep this one a secret. I promised Dana I wouldn't let it out of the family.

Snails moving fast

VANCOUVER (CP) — The snail business isn't as sluggish as it used to be, says escargot impressario Ted Hesketh, as squeamish Canadians acquire a taste for the gourmet gastropods.

Hesketh estimates that 20 per cent of a restaurant's customers will sample escargot, but it's important that they are billed on the menu under their French monicker.

"Twenty years ago, people would have found the idea of eating snails repugnant," he says. "That's changed, but still, if you call an escargot a snail, it's repugnant."

Hesketh is in the frozen snail business, delivering the little delicacies to B.C. restaurants in cases of 96-dozen priced at $252, or 22 cents a bite.

His company, Hescargot Ltd., is exclusive Canadian agent for self-proclaimed snail king Francois Picart, who rides herd on thousands of the critters at his Santa Rosa, Calif., ranch.

The snails are the same petit gris variety favored in France — and the same that can be found munching on the dahlias in California gardens. An infestation last year in Vancouver died out, a relief to gardeners, but ending any hope of raising them locally.

Putting some by — the coolest way

Maybe it's a primitive instinct, an urge for self-preservation, but there's something about luscious ripe fruits and vegetables that makes the average homemaker get the urge to "put a little by".

It's an urge that makes good sense. With inflation and food costs continually on the rise, preserving a little of summer's bounty now, while prices are relatively cheap, will pay handsome dividends during the winter months when produce prices inevitably rise.

But who wants to spend the summer in a steaming, hot kitchen?

If you home-freeze your produce, rather than can it, you don't have to. Unlike canning, home-freezing requires little or no cooking.

Most fruits and vegetables can be prepared for the freezer within 20 minutes; canning them often takes an hour or more. Moreover, when you freeze, there is no danger of food poisoning, which could occur if some food is incorrectly canned.

Best of all, when properly frozen, vegetables taste virtually the same as fresh. In most cases, the texture is almost identical; too, provided you don't overcook the vegetables when serving them.

While freezing fruits and vegetables is faster and easier than canning, there are still certain guidelines that should be followed. For best results, reliable home-freezing instructions are a must.

Last year, over 8,000 Canadians wrote to the Home Freezing Information Centre for its free pamphlets on home freezing which contain a blanching guide for vegetables as well as freezing techniques and tips for fruits, meats, fish and poultry.

Many of them also asked the centre's home economist for help with specific freezing problems. Here are the most common questions and her answers:

Q. Why do my beets and carrots taste spongy when I freeze them? I only blanch them 2 or 3 minutes and I never over-cook them when I serve them. — Mrs. J.P., Tompkins, Sask.

A. The length of time for blanching carrots is actually 4-5 minutes for whole, small carrots and 3 minutes for sliced or diced. Beets, like yams, potatoes and winter squash, should be cooked until tender before freezing, not just blanched.

If you are experiencing frost on the vegetables you freeze, check the temperature of your freezer. Your soggy vegetables may be due to too high a temperature. During the freezing process, the water in vegetables turns to ice crystals. If the temperature is 0°F (—18°C) or lower, the crystals are very tiny. When the temperature is warmer than this, the crystals formed are large and break the cell walls of the vegetable, causing a loss of moisture and a soggy product.

Q. Several of the foods I froze last year had white patches on them. Can I still eat them? — Mrs. H.S., Toronto, Ont.

A. These white patches are called freezer burn, which is the result of a loss of moisture. Freezer burn is not harmful, but the foods will be drier and less flavorful. To prevent this problem, bag your food in a good quality, heavy duty freezer bag and use the foods before they reach their maximum storage time. Be sure to extract all the air from the bags before freezing and tie them securely.

Q. Can cucumbers, radishes, celery and lettuce be frozen? — Mrs. P.B., Brossard, Quebec.

A. Yes, but only if you are using them in cooked dishes. Because of their high water content, these vegetables tend to break down, resulting in limp vegetables with poor texture. However, they are perfect for soups and casseroles. So why not freeze them when you have them leftover rather than let them go to waste?

question & answer

Q. Many restaurants, including some of the best, have the irritating habit of placing chilled butter and sometimes butter on ice on the table rather than serving the butter at room temperature.

The chilled or iced butter is unspreadable.

Can you explain why they do this?

A. It is probably a practice that dates back to the days when most dining rooms weren't air-conditioned.

And there are a surprising number of people who are not aware of the fact that very few dining rooms could boast air-conditioning until several years after the Second World War.

In midsummer the butter would melt on the bread and butter plate.

While I can condone the service of chilled butter, I do, like you, deplore butter served in chipped or shaved ice. It is a tacky and an unreasoned practice on the part of management.

And don't overlook the possibility that ice hard butter will likely be consumed in smaller quantities than softer.

Q. You recently wrote an article about clams and mentioned littlenecks, cherrystones and chowder clams. Have you ever heard of a clam called a geoduck?

A. Yes, but I've never sampled such a clam. The late Helen Evans Brown in her book, The West Coast Cook Book (Little, Brown, 1952), states that they are called "gooeyduck" by those who dig them and "gweduck" in most dictionaries.

The geoduck, she adds, "is a clam that must have been a favorite of the Brobdingnagians, who lived, according to Swift, where the Olympic Peninsula is actually situated." Geoduck, according to the author, means "dig deep" in an Indian language.

They are prepared by scalding in hot water, at which point the shells will open. They are skinned and the stomach is discarded. The neck may be ground for chowder and the body cut into steaks that must be tenderized by pounding before being breaded and fried in butter.

Q. I have a passion for mayonnaise sauces and one of my favorites is Russian dressing made with mayonnaise, chili sauce, horseradish and grated onion. Do you know why this is called Russian?

A. I rather doubt that you will find it in any Russian cookbook, and it seems quite definitely of American origin. To the best of my knowledge you won't find it in the French repertory of cooking under sauce Russe or otherwise. It is my belief that the original recipe for the dressing contained caviar and that that is the source of the name.

Gelatin eggs and live duck make kooky entrees

craig claiborne

Those who work in food professionally are often asked to deal in hyperboles. What is the best meal you ever ate? What is the worst meal? What is your favorite kind of food? What do you like to cook more than anything? And so on.

Within recent days I have been asked to name the most ludicrous recipe I have ever read. I have also been asked to relate the most humorous true food story I've ever read.

The award for the most ludicrous recipe goes to a newspaper. Both the name and region in which it is published are withheld for reasons that will be obvious. The recipe, published more than five years ago, follows without comment.

GELATIN EGGS

2 dozen large eggs
4 packages of flavored gelatin: 1 lime, 1 lemon, 1 cherry and 1 orange
Water.

1. Blow out contents of eggs without breaking shells: prick one end of the egg with a pin and make a slightly larger hole in the other end with an icepick. Holding egg over bowl, blow into the pinprick hole. Yolk and white will be blown out the other hole.

2. Run water through the eggshell and rinse out well. Mix each package of gelatin separately according to package directions, but omitting one-quarter cup of water for each flavor.

3. Light a candle and close the pin-sized hole in the eggs by dripping candle wax over it. Stand eggs, wax end down, in egg cartons.

4. Fill eggs with gelatin, one flavor per egg, by using an eyedropper. When all eggs are full, return carton to refrigerator and chill several hours.

5. To remove gelatin egg from shell, carefully crack shell like it was a hard-boiled egg. This part is a little tedious, but produces beautiful results if done slowly and cautiously. Makes three eggs for each of eight servings.

It would be impossible to name the single most humorous true food story I have ever read. Here, however, is an account that I have kept for several years in my file of miscellany.

SLIDELL, La. (AP) — Duck hunter Warren Stovall, relaxing at home after bagging a pair of mallards he intended to have mounted, went to his freezer to get ice for a drink.

When he opened the freezer door, a half-frozen duck with buckshot wounds in the neck and wing flapped out of the refrigerator and flew around the room.

"He started screaming," his wife, Charlotte, who was in another room watching television, said. "I think he thought the dead bird had come back to get him.

"He came running in with the duck, and it was alive. It had worked its way out of the foil and was sitting in the freezer when he opened it, and it flew out."

Stovall had shot the drake and a hen about dawn Saturday, and a busy taxidermist told him to freeze the birds and he would stuff them.

Stovall wrapped each duck separately in tin foil, sealing them with tape, and popped them in the freezer at 10 a.m. Saturday. It was 10 that night when the duck flew outof the freezer.

"The duck had worked his way out of the foil and must have been out a long time," said Mrs. Stovall. "There was bird mess all inside the freezer."

A weeping Mrs. Stovall wrapped the bird in a blanket and rocked it like a baby. She nursed it through the weekend and took it to the veterinarian. The vet said the stunned bird survived in the freezer because of its natural insulation.

The Stovalls decided to give the drake to a man who raises ducks.

If you picked a peck of cucumbers for making pickles, pickle them quickly. Home economists warn that cucumbers not pickled within 24 hours after picking can produce poor quality pickles. Don't try to pickle wax-covered cucumbers; the brine can't penetrate the wax. Don't select the largest cucumbers for pickling or table use. Large cukes tend to have more seed content.

Leftovers are more exciting if you (1) puree overripe fruits for ice cream topping or blender drinks, (2) marinate cooked green beans with oil, vinegar anda few dill seeds, (3) put limp garden salad in the blender to make cold gazpacho soup, and (4) dry out the musty flavor of salty snack foods on a tray in a warm oven.

There's a good reason to check cash register tapes: As the couple loaded grocery bags into the car, he said, 'I think we were overcharged." She sad, 'Don't bother; it's too embarrassing to go back." But back he went to the cashier, who found two mistakes. Two packages of fresh produce at 83 cents each had been rung up as $9.83 each. He got the $18 refund. Since then, he's found other mistakes in cash register tapes.

Waste not, want not. Loose or bagged tea absorbs other food odors and can become musty if the storage container isn't airtight. Carrots become bitter when stored too close to apples and pears. Fresh fruit stored close to head lettuce can cause brown spots on the lettuce. Instant coffee you bought a couple of years ago will stay good another year if you keep the lid on tight.

Kebob served up with a bun

Fun-Time Franks can be assembled ahead of time by weaving strips of bacon on skewers between chunks of frankfurters and green pepper. Simply grill over hot coals and brush with a tangy glaze of honey, prepared mustard and horseradish and pop into buns to make these kebob sandwiches extra special.

If burgers are more to your liking, baste them with an envelope of chili seasoning mix stirred into tomato juice after they have been cooked.

FUN-TIME FRANKS

1 pound frankfurters, cut in 1-inch chunks
2 to 3 green peppers, cut in squares
10 slices bacon, partially cooked
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish, drained
1 tablespoon honey
8 to 10 frankfurter rolls.

Alternate frankfurter chunks and pepper squares on 10 skewers, weaving bacon strips around them. Combine mayonnaise, mustard, horseradish, and honey; brush over kabobs. Grill over low coals, 10 to 15 minutes, turning frequently and brushing with glaze. Remove from skewers and serve on rolls. 8 to 10 servings.

FIESTA BURGERS

¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 envelope (1¾-oz.) chili seasoning mix
¾ cup tomato juice
1 tablespoon vinegar
1½ pounds ground beef
Hamburger rolls.

Cook celery and pepper in butter in small saucepan 5 minutes. Stir in seasoning mix, tomato juice, and vinegar; heat to simmering. Shape ground beef into 6 patties; grill over hot coals until done. Serve hamburgers on rolls, topped with warm sauce. 6 servings.

Psychologists settle fee dispute

The fee dispute between psychologists and the provincial government is settled and all that's needed now is treasury board approval of the agreement.

Dr. Cliff Ridley of the B.C. Psychological Association said today agreement was reached after a full-day session on Monday with Government Employees Relations Bureau officials and representatives of the various government agencies that use psychologists.

If approved, the top rate for psychologists in private practice will be $125 for a 3½-hour session.

The new rate would be retroactive from Aug. 1 and last until Aug. 1, 1981.

City endorses new police contract

The city of Victoria endorses the proposed police contract settlement worked out by mediator Clive McKee, Ald. Ron McKenzie said today.

A decision is expected later today on ratification by municipalities of the pact with the police forces of Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich. Policemen working for the first three municipalities have staged a limited "strike" since July 9 by refusing to wear uniforms.

The Saanich police contract runs for another year but it was reopened in these negotiations for wage adjustments and other issues.

Representatives of the member municipalities in the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association met for more than an hour Tuesday to discuss the tentative agreement but adjourned without approving it. They are to meet again at 4:30 p.m. today at the association's offices in Bastion Square.

"The feeling that I gathered from the meeting was that there were a couple of questions that the members wanted to mull over," said McKenzie, who is Victoria's GVLRA rep in the absence of Mayor Bill Tindall.

"I personally feel that the agreement should be supported."

McKenzie said the GVLRA members were presented with only a rough draft at their first meeting and some wanted to go over some points in greater detail.

"If I was guessing I would certainly guess there would be decision made on it (today)," said the alderman.

Policemen vote on the proposed settlement Thursday.

Mayor Mel Couvelier of Saanich said the contract — which for the first time will establish a standard agreement for the municipal police forces — involves giving up certain principles that have been in effect for a long time.

"Some of the trade-offs affect long-held basic beliefs of some of our members, and they wanted to sleep on it," he said.

"I hope we can settle it one way or the other today. I think we owe it to the police to let them know where we stand."

Ald. Neil Swainson, Oak Bay's representative on the GVLRA while Mayor Doug Watts is on holiday, wouldn't comment on the talks.

"I really can't say any more than Mel Couvelier said yesterday. I really can't say any more than I hope there will be a decision."

Lumber firms metric losers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lumber producers in British Columbia are ignoring up to $20-million worth of immediate business in the Middle East because they don't want to cut to metric sizes.

Anup Jubbal of Canadian Building Supplies Ltd. recently visited the Mideast and is trying to open a lumber distribution yard there.

"I've just returned from Kuwait and they're looking for white wood dimension lumber like spruce in all sizes," he said Tuesday in Kamloops. "There's a multi-million-dollar market there but Canadian businessmen aren't interested.

"I asked the commercial secretary in Kuwait what the problem was and he told me Canadians want everything set up for them immediately when they arrive. But the Arabs like to take a few days."

The problem, said Jubbal, is that Arab countries specifically want a wide variety of dimension lumber cut in lengths of three, 3½ and four metres while lumber here is cut in lengths such as six, eight, 10, 12 and 14 feet.

Although the B.C. forest industry is converting those sizes into metric equivalents, they still don't match what the Arabs want.

Jubbal said Chile and the Soviet Union are moving into Middle East lumber markets while Canadian producers continue to rely on an uneven demand from the United States.

Theft follows cloning error

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — A scientist who mistakenly cloned the wrong virus has been suspended from his job and locks have been changed and guards posted at his laboratory after the theft of a bottle of dangerous rabies vaccine virus, university officials said Tuesday.

The scientist, Dr. Samuel Kennedy, a researcher in recombinant DNA cloning at the University of California at San Diego, acknowledged last week that he had accidentally cloned a virus in violation of federal guidelines.

The bottle of rabies vaccine virus, which was taken Sunday night from the fifth-floor laboratory on this cliff-top campus overlooking the Pacific, was found unopened on a fourth-floor stairwell.

In a telephone call to a reporter afterward, a man who identified himself only as a former student, claimed responsibility for the theft and said: "It was pretty stupid, I guess."

Although the caller described his action as a lark, Kennedy disclosed a series of threatening telephone calls to his home and "possible sabotage" at work since last October.

"Somewhere between six and eight calls have been made to my home from an anonymous caller over the last several months saying the work I'm doing is dangerous and must be stopped," Kennedy said.

"It's a real possibility that entire cloning controversy was a direct act of sabotage," he said, referring to his cloning of the wrong insect virus last spring.

The National Institutes of Health and the university's biosafety committee have ordered investigations.

Kennedy, when he disclosed the apparent mix-up last week, said he cloned an African mosquito-borne semliki virus mistakenly, violating federal guidelines, while intending to produce a very similar sindbis virus, which requires fewer safety precautions. The mistake did not lead to any health dangers, authorities said.

In cloning, scientists produce a genetically identical duplicate of an organism by replacing the nucleus of an unfertilized egg with the nucleus of a cell from the organism.

Nurses charged with mercy killing

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Three nurses accused of causing the death of a 51-year-old cancer patient by administering an overdose of pain-killer were arraigned today on murder charges.

Ann Capute, 43, a licensed nurse from Plympton, and registered nurses Nancy Robbins, 26, of Taunton and Judith Foley, 30, of Foxboro also were accused of illegally dispensing a controlled substance, a drug.

"The instrument of death was morphine sulphate," said District-Attonrey Ronald Pina. The nurses denied the drug charge.

Pina also said the same grand jury will begin examining of records of other patients at the Morton Hospital in Taunton.

The three nurses were released on $5,000 personal recognizance and Superior Court Judge Francis Keating set pre-trial hearing for Sept. 5.

In sealed indictments returned Tuesday, a 16-member Bristol County grand jury accused the three in the May 18 death of Norma Leanues, 51.

Odds favor big quake soon for California

By LEE MAY
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Government geologists have warned California that the state is in a period "when another major earthquake is more likely" than at any time in the last 123 years.

In a previously unpublished letter to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and members of California's Office of Emergency Services, U.S. Geological Survey Director H. William Menard said that because of recent investigations "our concern over the possibility of a major earthquake in California is greater now than in 1976," when the survey issued a similar warning.

The letter was referred to in an article in Science 80 magazine, which also made available the text of the letter to Brown and Alex R. Cunningham, director of the California Office of Emergency Services. Science 80 is a publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

John J. Kearns, assistant director of the California Office of Emergency Services, said the warning "puts us in the middle because there is so much disagreement among scientists on the prediction of earthquakes."

Minard's letter says that the causes of "our increased concern" include:

—More strain along the San Andreas fault during the last year than has occurred in the six previous years.

No Hansard breach of MLA's privileges

The privileges of NDP MLA Al Passarell were not breached when a Hansard employee contacted the Church of Scientology last week shortly after the Atlin member made comments about the church in the house, deputy Speaker Walter Davidson ruled Tuesday.

Passarell had complained that his comments Thursday about a 16-hectare Crown land grant to what he said was a Scientology group, incorporated under the Societies Act as the God Bless You Holistic Society, were transmitted to church officials before a verbatim report of his remarks were delivered to members of the legislature.

Passarell asked Davidson to determine if his privileges had been breached — transcripts of legislative debate are supposed to be delivered to MLAs before anyone else gets them.

Davidson said in his decision that he had been advised by Hansard chief Garth Gislason that his staff did not transmit the full context of Passarell's speech.

"I am further advised that the research editor who made the enquiry in question has no connection directly or indirectly with that church," he said. "I believe therefore there was no intent to violate any privilege of the house and that normal research procedures were invoked only in the interests of accuracy."

Outside the house, Passarell said he accepted Davidson's decision, but said he didn't think it was proper for Hansard staff to phone persons to get technical information.

Tel asks LRB to halt walkout

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Telephone Co. has asked the Canada Labor Relations Board to end a walkout by about 180 company employees in the Lower Fraser Valley.

The workers, members of the Telecommunications Workers' Union, walked out earlier this month in a dispute over a seniority grievance.

Welfare squeeze denied

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy denied Tuesday that there is a special program under way to crack down on welfare fraud by forcing single parents back to work.

NDP critic Rosemary Brown (Burnaby-Edmonds) disclosed an internal department report Monday which recommends unexpected spot checks of homes and refusal to replace a welfare recipient's lost or stolen money.

Mrs. McCarthy said she had not seen the controversial report, but that ministry officials are always working to ensure that only people truly in need receive welfare dollars.

The report, from Roy Johnson, human resources co-ordinator, to Sam Travers, executive director of general administration, says too many social workers let their hearts rule their thinking and should stress accountability in the handling of public funds.

Johnson said single parents, who are classed as unemployable under human resources policy, are a real drain on the system and, in many cases, wrought with fraud.

He recommends that B.C. adopt a position similar to Alberta, where single parents are retrained for work and some child care provided.

He also suggests measures such as checking with employers of welfare recipients with part-time jobs to confirm earnings and to learn whether full-time work is available.

Johnson says in his May 28 report that his findings are meant to be constructive criticism.

"We must recognize the fact that all applicants are not honest and the system is so easy to beat if we continue to accept all statements without some measure of verification," the report says.

Ms. Brown said the report unfairly stereotyped welfare recipients as dishonest people.

Product praise under fire

The B.C. government should not be providing free advertising for Kraft Ltd., NDP agriculture critic Barbara Wallace said Tuesday.

She was talking about an item entitled "Kraft, a Consumer of B.C. Products," contained in the current issue of the Home Grown Quarterly, a publication of the provincial agriculture ministry.

Embellished with a photograph of margarine, salad dressing and other products, the blurb praises Kraft operations in the province. It ends with the statement:

"The Kraft name is synonymous with quality."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
2 ♡	2 ♠	4 ♡

Opening lead — king of spades.

There are times when a declarer must conduct an investigation of all pertinent factors in order to give himself the best chance for the contract. Consider this case where South gets to four hearts.

West commences the play by cashing the K-A of spades and then shifting to the nine of clubs at trick three. Dummy's queen loses to East's ace and back comes the jack of clubs to dummy's king.

South has lost the first three tricks and must now avoid the loss of a diamond trick to make the contract. However, before tackling the problem of how to play the diamonds, he does all he possibly can to learn how the unseen cards in the various suits are divided.

Declarer starts by playing the A-K of trumps and then leads a trump to dummy's queen. South next makes the crucial play of ruffing the four of clubs, West discarding a spade on the third round of clubs. The count of the hand is now complete and South should know exactly how to play the diamonds without losing a trick in the suit. He cashes the king of diamonds, finesses the nine of diamonds, returns to his hand with a trump and then finesses the jack of diamonds.

The reason South can confidently double-finesse in diamonds is based on simple arithmetic. He learned during the play that East had started with three hearts and six clubs (because West had shown up with precisely a singleton heart and a doubleton club).

South could also tell from the bidding that East had started with either three or four spades. With at least twelve of East's cards in three suits thus accounted for, it followed that East could not have been dealt more than one diamond and that the double-finesse in diamonds was therefore sure to succeed.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"That's right, two boys and a girl," said Terry. "The ages of the boys and my age total six times Carol's age, and when she was born Adam was half again as old as Ben was."

Alan shook his head. "I don't even know your age."

"Well, figure it out," Terry replied. "I'm just the total of their three ages, and Adam was a year younger than Ben is when Ben was as old as Carol is now."

Quite a teaser! How old was Terry?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: STEER was 10998, even.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BARNES - In loving memory of my beloved husband Jack (Friday August 13th, 1976).

"The Fisherman's Prayer
God grant that I may live
To fish until my dying day
And when it comes to my last cast
I then must humbly pray —
When in the Lord's safe landing net
And peacefully asleep
That in His mercy I may be judged
As "good enough" to keep.
And if all the world were ours to give
We'd give, yes and now
To see the face we loved so well
Come smiling through the door.
Sadly missed and in our memory always.

His loving wife Jean and family.

BARNES-John W. (Jack), August 13, 1976. In loving memory for the most thoughtful and kindess brother who ever passed this way, loved and respected by all who had the privilege of knowing him, how lucky we were to share his life for a little while.
Brother Frank and family.

BATESON — In loving memory of a wonderful Father, Father-in-law and Grandfather, John Keith Nielson Bateson, who was taken from us August 10, 1979. Sadly missed, but never forgotten. Ian, Cheryl, Stephen & Christine Bateson.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his names sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me
before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over Surety goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

'Dungeon & Dragon' whiz kid shot

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — James Egbert, the 17-year-old computer genius whose mysterious disappearance last year was linked to the Dungeons and Dragons fantasy game, remained unconscious Tuesday with a bullet wound in his head.

Max Peterson, spokesman for Grandview Hospital, said Egbert was in critical condition in the intensive care unit following surgery Monday. "It doesn't look too good," said the young man's father, optometrist James Egbert of Huber Heights. "They don't expect him to make it."

Police Lieut. Mike Sammons said Egbert was shot once in the head and that a .25-calibre automatic pistol was found near him on a sofa in his apartment.

Egbert disappeared from Michigan State University for 28 days last year and police speculated that he might have been deeply involved in a live version of the fantasy board game Dungeons and Dragons, in which players must overcome such obstacles as dragons and maze-like dungeons to reach a treasure. Authorities speculated he may have been hiding in utility tunnels beneath the campus, where students were believed to have laid out a dungeon for the game.

The young computer student, who had graduated from high school at the age of 13, was found after a country-wide search by private investigator William Dear of Dallas.

Dear has refused to disclose where he found Egbert, other than to say he found him locked in a dingy room containing two single beds. The boy also refused to discuss his disappearance.

Egbert moved from his parents' home to the apartment about three weeks ago.

After the disappearance, Egbert dropped out of Michigan State and entered Wright State University.

Before I ran out of space in yesterday's column, I was describing the delights — at least, to me — of processing the produce from our back yard vegetable plots. Once into such a taste-appealing subject, it's very hard indeed to desist.

Aside from peas, which I like to process with mint, one of our family's favorites is carrots. In particular, those second thinnings of baby finger-size gourmet carrots are just wonderful for freezing if you can manage to have enough left over after everyone has feasted upon them.

These baby carrots are easy to clean with the jet-spray method I discussed yesterday, utilizing a strong burst of water from the garden hose. After that, they just need steam-blanching, cooling and packaging.

Once the carrots are large and you want to freeze some packages, they can be cut diagonally or in whatever shape strikes your fancy. I like to put mine through a vegetable cutter with the waffler attachment. Those bright orange waffled rounds look so pretty the youngsters snatch them up as soon as they emerge from the machine. I suppose it's because they look like orange potato chips.

Another reason our family never has too large a carrot patch in the back yard is that we have one of those electric juicers that converts the biggest, toughest old carrots into the most delightful, refreshing pure juice drink. A gallon or so of that juice in the fridge and the man-of-the-house needn't concern himself with such trivialities as brewery disputes on a hot summer's day.

I waffle the carrots before steam-blanching but my beets I steam first, with their skins on, and then slip the peels off and waffle them once they are cooled.

We always have more spinach and chard than we can eat fresh or catch before they go to seed so these extra greens are washed, chopped and steamed for the winter as well. To serve, we place the frozen greens in a small casserole with a drop of oil on the bottom and a sprinkling of garlic salt on top. They can be placed in the oven to warm while an oven dinner is being cooked, to save energy.

There are many different methods to freeze corn and it seems everyone has his own special way. Some swear by freezing the unblanched corn on the cob in its green leaves, a method I haven't found successful.

I just steam-blanch the cobs, cool and package them much like other vegetables. But once the cobs are cooled, I separate the more uneven cobs and scrape the kernels from them for some packages of corn kernels, a family favorite as a vegetable or for corn chowder or winter stews. I'm afraid that with the cool spring and early summer we experienced this year, talk of processing home-grown corn will be purely academic for many gardeners.

We always like to freeze a few tomatoes, just as they are, to toss into a winter stew or soup pot. The skins slip off easily if the frozen tomato is placed under running hot water for just a second or two.

And of course there is nothing like your own home-canned tomatoes. I just slip the skins off slightly blanched tomatoes and push them into sterilized jars to form juice, adding a tablespoon each of salt and sugar to each quart jar. The jars are processed in a boiling water bath.

A glut of tomatoes can be boiled up and put through a sieve or food mill for tomato sauce or puree, or juice depending on how thick it turns out. This year for the first time I'm growing the paste type tomatoes for home-made ketchup and tomato paste.

One great method of utilizing a surplus of various vegetables is to create a batch of winter borscht for the freezer. You can use peas, potatoes, broad beans, beets and beet greens, cabbage, carrots, onions and tops. Chop them all up, cover with water and bring to a boil.

Vinegar, dill weed, salt and pepper may be added to taste. Pack in double bags and place them in some container to freeze, just to be safe in case one of the bags should burst. Then, in the depths of winter, take a bag of borscht, heat it and add cream and butter for a real treat from last season's garden.

Beverly Hills gunman shot

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A former Israeli diplomat and 15 others attending a Beverly Hills dinner party were held hostage by an armed robber who later was killed by police, officers said.

Police Lieut. David Griffey said police surrounded the home of Dr. Benjamin Schneiderman late Tuesday and killed the man after an anonymous telephone caller advised them of the robbery.

Guests at the party included veteran Israeli diplomat Yehuda Gaulan.

Police who surrounded the residence saw the gunman pointing a .38-calibre revolver at the hostages, Griffey said.

Griffey said the man spotted a policeman at the window, then crouched and pointed his gun at the policeman, who fired two rounds from a shotgun.

The man reeled back into the hallway. A second officer outside the residence saw him crouched there and fired one round from his service revolver, Griffey said.

Fossil microbes push dawn of life way back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An international search into the distant past has ended this week after uncovering a suprisingly rich and complex world of microscopic life that lived on earth billions of years ago.

The project has proven the existence of fossilized microbes that lived 3.5 billion years ago — scarcely a billion years after the earth was formed from a swirling cloud of dust and gas in space.

And scientists said those oldest known fossils — chains of cells that look like tiny strings of beads — were so unexpectedly complex that the first, far-simpler living thing must have appeared many millions of years earlier.

"I think (the project) resulted in a good deal more than we had expected," said paleobiologist William Schopf, who conceived the 15-month program based at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"There have been some major discoveries that made a tremendous impact in the field," he said Monday as the program wound up with a two-day symposium. "We have found that things were a lot more complex a lot earlier than any of us had suspected."

The $300,000 project was paid for by the U.S. National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Besides expanding on the previously reported fossils, the team found evidence that photosynthesis — the energy source of modern plants — may have begun 2.8 billion years ago. That's an especially crucial point in the history of life, since photosynthesis changed earth's poisonous primordial atmosphere by releasing the oxygen that lets animals and humans exist.

The 15 top researchers, gathered from the United States, Australia, Canada, West Germany and Puerto Rico to represent a variety of scientific disciplines, added at least 400 million years to the confirmed history of life.

Great-grandaddy of all trout found

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — A University of Idaho graduate student has discovered a 20-million-year-old fossil fish that may be a previously unknown species from the early Miocene period.

Bill Rember found the 60-centimetre fossil fish, believed to be an ancient relative of modern-day trout, in the Clarkia fossil beds of the St. Maries River valley.

Rember made the find earlier this year while at the site with University of Idaho geology professor C. J. Smiley.

The fish was discovered in the same sediment layer where many other fish fossils have been found. All had their mouths open, indicating they suffocated, he said.

Smiley said the fossil was found a few centimetres below a thick layer of volcanic ash.

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's black-majority government will organize a peoples' militia of former black guerrillas to crack down on mounting lawlessness in the countryside, The Herald reported Tuesday.

The independent newspaper quoted unnamed cabinet sources as saying the militia "will be used to protect the public, particularly in rural areas, against the activities of dissidents."

Hundreds of armed men who belonged to various guerrilla factions have been roaming the country killing, robbing and raping.

A 68-year-old white farmer, Gerald Adams, was shot dead last week on the farm he managed near Salisbury and Edgar Tekere, Mugabe's manpower and planning minister, was arrested for the crime. Six men described as Tekere's bodyguards also were detained and eight others are being sought.

About 35,000 guerrillas, including many loyal to Mugabe, gathered in assembly camps last January under a British-sponsored ceasefire that ended a seven-year war against white-minority domination. Mugabe's party then won elections in the former British colony known as Rhodesia and established black rule.

Mugabe, speaking in the northwestern town of Sinoia at a Heroes' Day rally, said an undisclosed number of guerrillas would be deployed to protect civilians, but he gave few details.

According to The Herald, Mugabe has talked to Local Government Minister Eddison Zvobgo, who would be in charge of the militia force. It said legislation creating the militia would soon be introduced in parliament.

In his Sinoia speech, Mugabe blamed much of the crime on followers of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the country's first black prime minister, and vowed they would be "crushed."

Muzorewa won elections in April, 1979, that were called by the transitional government formed by moderate black leaders and Prime Minister Ian Smith, whose white-minority government had unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965. Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, refused to participate in those elections and the war continued.

Muzorewa, Mugabe, Nkomo and Smith then agreed to British talks late last year. The negotiations ended with a pact providing for formal independence and the elections in February won by Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union.

Mounting layoffs mark falling U.K. car sales

LONDON (AP) — Economic recession and falling sales of new cars were blamed by three major automakers Tuesday in annoucing layoffs and short-time working for 50,500 workers.

"During the last four months the car market has been running at 32 per cent below last year's figures," said a spokesman in Coventry for French-owned Talbot Motors, formerly Chrysler.

Talbot, which has laid off 2,550 workers in the last six months, said it will put 6,800 workers in England on a two-day week and another 4,700 in Scotland on a three-day week.

Leyland Vehicles, the bus and truck-building side of British Leyland, is giving 9,000 staff in Lancashire a three-week holiday on 95 per cent pay as an alternative to short-time working.

Vauxhall, owned by General Motors, told 30,000 workers returning from annual holidays that they will go on short-time until the end of the year.

John Carty, a union official at Talbot's Linwood plant in Scotland, urged the government to introduce temporary import controls on foreign cars.

For the first time, Leyland last month had a smaller share of the British car market than Japanese imports, which secured 18 per cent of all new car registrations against 16 per cent for Leyland.

Apprentice march sparks violence

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Thousands of Northern Ireland Protestants lined the streets Tuesday for the traditional Apprentice Boys March commemorating the siege of the city by invading Roman Catholic forces almost 300 years ago.

As in each year since 1969, a disturbance occurred after the parade. Ten youths believed by police to be Catholics hijacked two buses and a van and set them afire. Police wearing helmets and carrying riot shields quickly dispersed the gang.

The Apprentice Boys March 11 years ago is held partially responsible for the current wave of violence in the British province. It was after the 1969 march that Protestants and Catholics clashed and staged a running battle for five days with almost 1,000 policemen. There were scores of injuries before British troops were ordered into Northern Ireland.

Courts may chop awards, bikers warned

B.C.'s motorcyclists were warned today they face substantially reduced insurance settlements if they suffer head injuries while not wearing a helmet.

The warning came from Insurance Corporation of B.C. spokesman Bob Egby after the province's compulsory helmet law was shot down Monday by Vancouver provincial court judge Cyril Woodcliffe.

Egby said settlement reductions are made regularly but only cases involving large claims that reach the higher courts come to the attention of the public.

He said the provisions of common law still apply despite the lower court ruling.

Judge Woodcliffe ruled the Motor Vehicle Act does not give the superintendent of motor vehicles the authority to regulate the use of helmets. He said that authority belongs to the provincial cabinet.

But Egby said if it can be shown medically that a person's injuries were made more severe by not wearing a helmet or a seatbelt, then ICBC will argue for a reduction in the settlement.

He said when it is proved not wearing a seatbelt or a helmet contributed to a person's injuries, the corporation and the civil courts conclude the victim was negligent and contributed to his or her own injuries.

"It's upon you to take any action to prevent or reduce any injuries to yourself when there's an accident," Egby said.

The provincial government will appeal Woodcliffe's ruling.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, Alberta's helmet law suffered a setback when a man accused of operating a motorcycle without a helmet had the charge dismissed in traffic court.

Provincial court judge Ray Thomas ruled the province's motorcycle legislation is contrary to the Alberta Bill of Rights.

James Pennington, 27, was charged following a demonstration by members of the Bikers Rights Organization who were protesting the province's compulsory helmet legislation.

Judge Thomas said in an interview later the province's law is "Big Brother legislation."

"It's legislating me against myself. I see it as being contrary to the Alberta Bill of Rights."

Thomas said current laws enforcing the use of seat belts in some provinces are similar to the one forcing motorcyclists to wear helmets. Alberta does not have mandatory seatbelt legislation.

The judge refused to speculate if an appeal will be launched by the Crown.

"They can do what they want, but I think I've opened a wasp's nest."

Speeding drunk dies — but tires get blame

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court says Ford Motor Co. was negligent in the death of a Louisiana man who was drunk when his sports car crashed at 168 kilometres an hour.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal said the accident was caused by improper tires, not by the man's drinking or by the excessive speed.

Shelby Leleux died and a passenger was seriously hurt when his 1976 Mercury Cougar crashed near Kaplan on June 6, 1976.

In its ruling Monday, the 5th Circuit upheld a lower court decision by U.S. District Judge Eugene Davis.

The appeal court said Leleux's car was equipped with a 425 horsepower engine and clearly was designed to be capable of speeds over 160 km/h.

But the car was equipped with Goodyear tires designed to be safe only at speeds less than 136 kilometres an hour, the court said.

Ford was negligent, the 5th Circuit said, in not warning Leleux of the tires' limitations.

Trial evidence showed that the left rear tire of the car came apart as Leleux and a friend were driving to a dance in Kaplan.

Ford argued that the men had been drinking for more than eight hours and should have known that driving at 160 km/h was dangerous.

But the 5th Circuit rejected those arguments, saying Leleux had no way of knowing that the tires were safe only up to 136 km/h.

The 5th Circuit also said Goodyear was not at fault because its tires would be safe if used on vehicles which would not be driven faster than 136 km/h.

In its ruling, the 5th Circuit upheld Davis's decision to award $36,000 to Leleux's mother and $36,000 to the injured passenger.

The company had no immediate comment.

Dollar exchange

U.S. dollar at banks this morning bought $1.1575 Canadian, according to the Visitors Information Centre.

Colwood RCMP and Langford fire officials today expressed grave concern over a potentially devastating propane gas leak from a railway tank car in Vancouver Island Gas Co.'s yard at 2885 Jacklin Road Tuesday night.

The leak, detected about 11 p.m. by a Bray Avenue resident who heard hissing, gave police and firemen several anxious moments.

"One match in the wrong place and the blast would have levelled everything in a six block radius," a police spokesman said.

Joe McBride, manager of the gas works, however, downplayed the dangers.

"It was no major thing," he said. "It was only a small leak from a valve and there was no excessive amount of gas around."

McBride refused further comment but Langford fire chief Al Le Quesne said he was very concerned.

He said the leak had apparently existed for some time and firemen were worried because the wind was carrying the gas toward an industrial area.

Le Quesne said when he first arrived, firemen had no idea what was causing the leak.

"But we weren't about to take any chances," he said.

Firemen stood by while Le Quesne and Captain Joe Arden gingerly climbed the tank car, found a small valve open and closed it.

Le Quesne said if the trouble had been major he would have evacuated everyone within a mile of the yard.

"It was unnerving to say the least . . . not a good situation."

Police and firemen were investigating to determine whether the valve was left open by accident or was opened deliberatly.

Le Quesne said there was no sign of forced entry into the yard which is surrounded by a chain-link fence topped with barbed wire.

He said the company has a good record for safety and added employees have helped firemen become well-schooled in techniques fighting such fires.

"They have spent a lot of time in the past showing us the various valves and safety features in the equipment in the yard. It paid off."

Black rioters burn trucker

CAPE TOWN (UPI) — Rioting blacks stopped a truck in a Cape Town ghetto Tuesday, dragging its colored driver from the cab, stoning him and then burning him to death in the second such attack in two days, police said.

On Monday, crowds of young blacks stoned and burned to death two white truck drivers in the same ghetto.

South African riot police tried to disperse the crowds Tuesday, charging into them with clubs and firing tear gas.

Police said the colored (mixed race) man was driving his vehicle through the black ghetto when he was "hijacked." They said youths pulled him out of the truck, stoned and then set him on fire. The blacks then attacked another truck and set it on fire, severely burning the occupants.

The spot where they attacked the trucks is ideal for an ambush.

Liberal star rising, according to Gallup

MONTREAL (CP) — The proportion of Canadians who approve of the record of the Trudeau government since the February election has increased to 43 per cent in July from 37 per cent in May, says a Gallup poll published today.

The proportion of those who said they disapprove of the government's record dropped slightly to 39 per cent in July from 40 per cent in May, while 19 per cent said they did not know in July compared with 22 per cent in May, the poll said.

The results varied widely by region, with the approval rating in July standing at: 51 per cent for the Atlantic provinces compared with 42 per cent in May; 48 per cent for Quebec compared with 44 per cent in May; 47 per cent in Ontario compared with 39 per cent in May; 27 per cent for the Prairies compared with 30 per cent in May and 29 per cent for British Columbia compared with 22 per cent in May.

The poll also said there has been a slight increase in the proportion of Canadians who said they would vote Liberal, up to 48 per cent in July from 47 per cent in June. Support for the Conservatives among those questioned dropped to 30 per cent in July from 31 per cent in June.

Those who said they support the New Democratic Party increased to 21 per cent in July from 20 per cent in June. Only one per cent of those questioned in July said they would vote for another party compared with two per cent in June.

The poll was conducted through in-home, personal interviews with about 1,000 adults who were 18 years old or more. Gallup said samples of this size should not vary more than four percentage points at a 95-per-cent confidence level.

Golden wedding the real thing

PERTH (UPI) — A couple who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in October found a 320-ounce gold nugget today using a metal detector in the new gold rush in Western Australia.

"The nugget was so heavy, I had to stop for a rest several times on my way back to the car," said 72-year-old Jack Bray.

Recent gold finds have started a rush for the precious metal that has sent thousands of hopeful prospectors to mineral-rich Western Australia and the southeastern state of Victoria, where big finds have also been made.

Bray said he found the nugget, worth $196,800 at current prices, near Kalgoorlie, about 300 miles east of Perth. He said he probed about five inches below the surface with a metal detector and came out with the nugget.

Kalgoorlie has been rediscovered in the new gold rush. Mines have been re-opened because of soaring gold prices and people with metal detectors have been searching the 100-square miles of abandoned gold diggings around town.

Last month a retired businessman and his wife found a 400-ounce nugget near Kalgoorlie. It was the largest nugget found in the recent rush.

Rail wreckers sabotaged

KELOWNA (CP) — Deliberate sabotage of specialized rail equipment being used by Pacific Northern Rail Contractors Corp. to dismantle the historic Kettle Valley Railway has set the company back at least two weeks.

George Braun, vice-president of the Langley firm, said Tuesday damage to three hydraulic spike pullers and a front-end loader is estimated from $13,000 to $15,000.

The vandalism was discovered by workmen Tuesday when they arrived at two locations near McCulloch to continue demolition of the McCulloch-to-Chute Lake section of the railway.

Someone poured sand in the gas tank of a large $28,000 spike puller, ripped off its hydraulic lines, bent its controls, cut fuel lines and battery cables and used a metal bar torn from the two-year-old machine to smash other parts.

A new front-end loader had its dashboard gauges smashed and fuel and electrical lines cut.

Two smaller one-year-old hand spike pullers left eight kilometres up the line the night before had sand poured in their gas tanks. They were then started and after the engines seized were thrown down a steep enbankment.

Workmen will continue dismantling the 48-kilometre rail line using hand tools, Braun said, adding it would be at least two weeks before work is fully mechanized again.

Terry Brown, a member of the Kettle Valley Heritage Society, said the society would "get a black eye for this."

Brown, who assisted Pacific Northern employees in hauling the damaged equipment, said: "It's a crying shame. These guys are just doing their job and there's no sense in making it tough for them."

Kennedy wins on platform

NEW YORK (UPI) — Democrats nominate Jimmy Carter for president again tonight to run on a platform carrying the imprint of his vanquished rival, Sen. Edward Kennedy, whose speech captured the heart of the Democratic Convention for an evening.

Kennedy's old-fashioned, emotional stem-winder Tuesday night brought delegates jammed into Madison Square Garden to their feet and tears to the eyes of his supporters when he blasted Ronald Reagan and ticked off the things that make Democrats different from Republicans.

So electrified were the delegates by the speech and by the wild, 39-minute demonstration it generated, that the Carter forces hastily cut a deal: they would cede Kennedy his $12 billion jobs program in the Democratic platform to avoid a potentially humiliating defeat on national television.

The delegates roared approval of three important economic planks — virtually all Kennedy had fought for except a call for mandatory wage and price controls. He gave that up in what Carter aides called a "significant" concession.

Carter earlier agreed to one Kennedy plank that social programs should not be cut to balance the budget, but violently opposed two others — the jobs program and giving jobs priority over inflation control.

"The mood of the house here, it's Kennedy's night," said Democratic National Chairman John White in explaining the steamroller effect of Kennedy's words. "Everyone wants to show the senator, 'we love you.' "

There was no immediate reaction to the convention action from Carter, who was flying in from Washington today. But campaign chairman Robert Strauss hinted Carter simply may ignore the economic planks added on the floor.

"President Carter feels very strongly that this is a mistake and there's no point in glossing it over,"

Child adoption ads ruled illegal in B.C.

The B.C. government has added a section to the Adoption Act making it an offence, punishable with a maximum $10,000 fine, to advertise for adoption of children.

The new section also makes it an offence to either offer or accept money or a consideration of any kind to induce a person to make a child available for adoption.

Addition of the section follows concerns raised in March about a newspaper advertisement seeking expectant mothers willing to put a child up for adoption in return for pre-natal expenses.

The lawyer who placed the ad said he was fulfilling the request of a client. He said he had used the method two years ago to find a baby for another client.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said then she was shocked by the advertisement and promised legislation to prevent further advertising.

Mrs. McCarthy said the new section will not limit private adoptions, but will ensure adoption won't be treated as a commerical enterprise. About 35 of 727 adoptions in B.C. were carried out privately last year.

Another amendment to the Adoption Act provides for voluntary transfer of guardianship of a child to the superintendent of child welfare during the six-month waiting period between the time the child goes to the adoptive home and the time of the hearing of the adoption order.

Currently, a child's parents retain 'legal' guardianship even though they have signed adoption consents and are no longer in contract with the child.

The minister said many adopting parents had expressed concern about this "legal limbo" and had asked for such an amendment.

Buchanan confirms he's out of politics

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Judd Buchanan, member of Parliament for London West, made it official today — he's through with politics.

Buchanan, former cabinet minister and considered the Liberal party's chief lieutenant in Ontario, had wanted to meet with his local riding executive and break the word to them first but word leaked out of Ottawa on Tuesday.

First elected in 1968, he became minister of Indian and northern affairs in 1974, minister of public works in 1976 and minister of state for science and technology in 1977.

He was dropped from the cabinet following the Feb. 18 election and it was rumored he was unhappy with Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to relegate him to the back benches.

Buchanan, in an interview at his constituency office in downtown London, would only confirm that there was some bitterness and frustration at the time but says it has since dissipated.

Buchanan will become president of a new company in Calgary engaged in natural gas exploration, but said he cannot provide further details because of contractural arrangements still to be concluded.

Another hijack; 'not our week'

MIAMI (AP) — An Air Florida jetliner carrying 74 people was hijacked to Cuba today, the second Air Florida plane in four days hijacked on the short hop between Key West and Miami.

"This isn't our week," said Air Florida spokesman Robin Cohn.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta said Flight 707, diverted 10 minutes after its 10:30 a.m. EDT takeoff from Key West, landed safely in Havana at 11:15 a.m. All 68 passengers and six crew members were reported to be safe.

There was no immediate word on when the plane would be returned.

On Sunday, a Spanish-speaking man hijacked a Miami-Key West flight to Havana.

Argentina inflation hits 140%

GENEVA (UPI) — Argentina had the world's highest rate of inflation last year with prices soaring 140 per cent, the International Labor Organization said today.

Kuwait was at the other end of the scale with an inflation rate of 4.4 percent, the ILO said.

The worst-hit nation after Argentina last year was Israel with inflation of 111 per cent, the ILO said.

Dispute delays ferry

The ferry Queen of the North was delayed for nearly five hours in Port Hardy on northern Vancouver Island on Tuesday when members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union stopped work in a dispute over vessel procedure.

Ron Davis, a spokesman for B.C. Ferry Corp., said union members disputed instructions to carry out a 24-hour visual fire patrol. The patrol is required because of a defect in the vessel's automatic fire alarm panel.

Davis said the dispute was resolved and the vessel continued its voyage to Prince Rupert.

Wild cheers for Kennedy

he said. "We think this plank is wrong ... you can't write an economic program on the floor of a convention."

Eight minority planks remained for action today, but only three were controversial. Two dealt with the MX missile — Kennedy's demands a search for alternatives to the costly system, and another would ban it. The third plank opposes import fees on oil and gas. Kennedy, third brother of a tragedy-scarred family to seek the presidency, ended his bid 24 hours earlier. But he won the hearts of most of the 5,436 delegates and alternates, reciting the liberal principles he called "the heart of our traditions ... the soul of our party across the generations."

He sharply attacked Reagan as an apostle of bygone times, saying the GOP nominee is "no friend of labor ... no friend of our great urban centres ... no friend of the senior citizen ... no friend of the environment."

Women comprise 50 per cent of the Democratic delegates, and they demonstrated their clout by adding two feminist planks to the platform.

One would require the party to withhold endorsement and assistance from any Democratic office seeker who opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. The other would reinstate federal fundings of abortions for the poor.

In contrast, the Republicans last month in Detroit refused to back the ERA and pledged to seek a constitutional amendment banning all abortions.

The roll call for the president's renomination highlights tonight's session. Kennedy has asked his name not be placed in nomination, but Rep. Ron Dellums of California, a leader of the blacks at the convention, is attempting to acquire the needed 333 signatures to have his name proposed. Vice President Walter Mondale will be renominated Thursday, and the 38th Democratic convention will end that night.

How could post office lose track of $18,000 in cheques?

Tom Corbett has had it with the post office.

The owner of Corbett Floor Coverings at 4087 Quadra Street, Corbett is now seriously considering using a courier service to deliver cheques to his suppliers.

That way, he'd at least be able to raise a ruckus if the cheques weren't delivered. He might even get his money back, which is more than the post office has offered in this latest case of rain or sleet or hail or something messing up a mail delivery.

It started in early June as Corbett prepared for a vacation in his native Scotland.

He usually pays his suppliers on the 15th of each month, but as he was going to be out of the country he made out all the cheques early and gave them to Mike Read, his assistant manager.

On June 16, Darlene Ell, the company secretary, handed the bundle of 20 envelopes containing $18,444.25 worth of cheques to Rod, the regular postman.

Subsequently, Rod was to tell Corbett Floor Coverings that he had put the mail into a bag on the wall at Postal Station A on West Saanich Road, the same bag into which all such collected mail goes.

As Corbett was to later suggest, the mail went into the bag and into oblivion.

A week after the mail had been handed over, a phone call came from one of the companies which should have received a cheque. Accustomed to receiving a cheque from Corbett soon after the 15th, the supplier wondered where the June cheque was.

Read said the cheque was in the mail, and would they please call when they received it.

A few days later the same company called back and said the cheque hadn't arrived.

By this time letters had begun to arrive from other companies on the list, reminding Corbett Floor Coverings their June payments were overdue.

Read asked Ell to call other companies on the list which hadn't been heard from to find out if they'd received their cheques.

Not a single cheque had been delivered.

Read called the main post office and talked to a Mr. Young. Read says Young lectured him, telling him he wasn't supposed to hand mail to a postman but should have dropped it into a mailbox.

The man said he couldn't help anyway, and when Read asked to speak to someone higher up, the man replied, "There is no one higher up."

Click.

Now nervous about the whereabouts of the cheques, Read went to the bank and put a stop payment order on all of them, at a cost of $1.50 each.

Corbett returned to Victoria July 19 to find incoming letters from suppliers demanding payment.

First, he arranged to have a new batch of cheques made out and sent to his suppliers.

Then he tried to figure out where the cheques had gone.

Then Corbett talked to a Mr. Ball at Postal Station A.

"He said he'd get back to me," Corbett said. "He never did."

The Times contacted Little and when asked if any progress had been made in the case, he replied, "No. Not that I know of. We never did locate those.".

"I'm afraid there's nothing I can tell you," Little said. "It's still under investigation."

"When something comes up we'll notify the customer."

Corbett says he's not holding his breath. A single cheque went missing in the mails last year, so this isn't the first time and Corbett doesn't think he'd want to go through it all again.

And he's not sure his customers really believe his story. Some have phoned wanting to know if his company is in financial difficulty.

"All because those so-and-so's lost my mail."

Read and Corbett with mail that's probably going by courier from now on

HEU staff returning to work

Hospital Employees Union staff and clerical workers started returning to work Tuesday after a week-long sit-in at union offices in Victoria, Vancouver, Kelowna and Prince George.

The 28 HEU members started job action last Wednesday as a result of a lengthy contract dispute.

They would not disclose settlement terms but one employee commented: "Ours is a unique relationship and it required a unique solution."

Hornby lodge on block

Tribune Bay Lodge on four acres of Hornby Island upland will be sold later this year by public tender, Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot said Tuesday.

The lodge and 73 acres of prime parkland was bought by the government and the Devonian Foundation in 1978 and a park established at Tribune Bay.

Included in the lodge sale are a wash house, sleeping cabins and water system. No waterfront land will be sold.

Firemen felled while sharing oxygen masks

Three city firemen were hospitalized for smoke inhalation and half a dozen others were treated at the scene when they shared their air masks with tenants fleeing a $100,000 fire in the basement of a highrise apartment block early today.

Fireman Fred Beadle, 35, who was overcome by smoke in a hallway of the 13-storey Princess Patricia apartments, 701 Esquimalt, is in stable condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Another fireman, Hans Rudwaleit, 40, was kept in hospital overnight and the third, Stuart Hemmings, 26, who collapsed in the Bay Street fire hall after fighting the fire, was released after treatment.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson called the firemen's actions courageous and selfless.

"They put the safety of others ahead of themselves."

The fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. in a locker room in the basement of the building.

Severson said the heat and smoke activated the apartment's fire alarm system but most of the tenants apparently ignored the ringing bells.

"I think it was a case of people beginning to cry wolf," said Severson, adding there have been several false alarms in the building over the years.

By the time firemen arrived, smoke had spread up through the first seven floors and tenants were stumbling through hallways trying to get out.

Severson said the smoke was thick and firemen had to share their air masks with tenants as they guided them to safety.

About three tenants as well as six or seven firemen required treatment at the scene for smoke inhalation.

The building was evacuated while firemen fought the blaze, confining it to the locker room.

The tenants were allowed to return to their suites at 3:30 a.m.

A team of investigators is trying to determine the cause.

Severson noted it was the second apartment locker fire in recent months. The previous one, at 2136 Ridge Road on June 28, caused about $8,000 damage and was started, firemen believe, by careless smoking.

"The dangers are always there," said Severson. "It's a place just waiting for a fire to start."

Indians trot out treaty

Members of the Tsawout Indian band have invoked a 150-year-old treaty to stop a proposed marina from being built in Saanichton Bay.

They claim the treaty, signed by Sir James Douglas, gave them total fishing rights to the area and say a marina, proposed by Saanichton Marina Ltd., would harm fish stocks.

But Mayor Dave Hill of Central Saanich says a study undertaken four years ago indicated a marina would not necessarily harm the environment.

The area has been zoned for a marina since 1967 and the community plan adopted last year allows for such a use.

Council has has referred the matter to the attorney-general's ministry.

FUTURE FISHERMAN Shaun Gray gets a line on the latest in salmon enhancement work at Mayfair Mall display which will run until Saturday. Shaun and his mother, Mrs. Bruce Gray, 3950 Reynolds Court, were among thousands who took break in shopping to view the environment ministry display which features live fish, slide shows, movies and video tape productions showing fish management techniques. Salmonid Enhancement Program aims to double fish population in B.C. rivers.

Pain eased on surtax

The provincial government has amended the Urban Transit Authority Act to overcome inequities in the new surtax on hydro bills which helps pay for urban transit.

Regulations in the current act drew protests from some homeowners and a large number of businesses unhappy about how the fee was imposed by local governments.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday the power levy charged against residential units now will be a stipulated amount on a per unit basis rather than on a per meter basis.

A number of residences were being charged for more than one meter.

"When the municipalities imposed the power levy to raise funds to cover their share of the urban transit operation deficit, it was not understood that a very significant number of residences had more than one hydro meter," Vander Zalm said in a news release.

The amendment also provides that businesses are charged on a basis of a percentage of electricity usage with a maximum and minimum sum.

Woman seriously injured

A 24-year-old Saanich woman is in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with head injuries received when struck by a car in front of her home on Boleskine Road Tuesday night.

Saanich police said the woman, whose name has not been released pending notification of next-of-kin, emerged from the rear of a parked car and was walking across the road when hit.

Police attached no fault to the driver of the car whose name has also been withheld.

He likes trains, cruise ships

Victoria businessman Ken Showers, who ran the Colwood train and came within a whisker of owning the Princess Marguerite, now wants to buy a cruise ship — and run the customers up to Duncan on a new excursion train.

"Both these projects are possible if there is public support for the ideas," he said today.

"We need the co-operation of CP Rail if we want to run an excursion train but they are cool to the idea. They say there is no demand for it, so why bother?

"I want to prove they are wrong."

His train plan is to buy five 1930 passenger coaches and hire CP Rail to pull them back and forth between Victoria and Duncan on the E & N.

"A private organization would operate the train and would pay the CPR for its services. I know it would be a success, especially if package tours are arranged."

Showers has also done background studies on the feasibility of buying the Prince George cruise ship from a Portland group and run year-around cruises from Victoria and Vancouver.

"The CN built the Prince George in Victoria in 1948 and regularly ran crusies north. A Portland group bought her on speculation and they have kept her in good condition."

The price tag for renovations and first year of operation is under $4 million, he said.

Showers hopes to run the Prince George from Victoria to Alaska in the summer months. During spring and fall she would go on shorter tours up the B.C. coast.

"In the winter the Prince George could become a party ship. She would be available for two or three-day trips south or for weekend excursions from Victoria, Vancouver or Seattle.

"All these things are possible if the community wants them."

Showers operated a tourist train from Colwood on CN track during the early 1970s but went out of business because the CN wanted to abandon the line in order to collect a federal subsidy.

In 1974 the CPR agreed to sell him the Princess Marguerite for $1.2 million. Just before the deal was completed the NDP government stepped in and bought the vessel.

"When Social Credit formed a government I tried to buy the Marguerite from them but they weren't interested in selling. I'm sure they're not interested in selling her now."

Showers said private enterprise can successfully operate tourist enterprises like cruise ships and excursion trains but there has to be evidence of community support before companies and investors will get interested in the projects.

New York

Stock prices were steady in fairly active trading today, struggling back from a steep selloff in the previous session.

The widely watched blue chip index fell about two points in the early going, climbed back to a two-point gain by early afternoon then slipped again.

Analysts viewed the market's partial recovery as a continuation of forces which have helped push the market to its highest levels in years recently.

Those include a belief that the recession may have touched bottom and a view that stocks are relatively more attractive in the face of a decline in rates on interest bearing investments.

Warner Lambert, unchanged at $20½, topped the NYSE most active list in afternoon trading. Sony which added 1½ points in active trading Tuesday fell back ⅜ to $11⅝.

Among other actively traded issues, Storage Technologies gained 1⅛ to $19⅜; American Telephone and Telegraph added ⅜ to $53½ and UAL dropped ½ to $22⅜.
